GLENDALE POST WILL STAGE BIG CELEBRATION

American Legion Post No. 127 Will Hold Parade Starts at 10 a. m.

BOW HEADS AT 9 A. M.

Football Game is Scheduled for Afternoon, Wrestling Match Big Event

DAY'S PROGRAM

9:00 to 9:02—Silent Prayer for Legion Heroes.
10:00—Glendale's Greatest Parade
2:00—High School Game, Glendale Heavyweight football team plays Wynonia's undefeated team for Central League football championship.
2:00—Gala Day at the Sheesley Shows.
7:00 to 9:00 p. m.—Carnival and Mardi Gras.
9:00—Elks' evening for boxing and wrestling bouts.
9:00—Three rounds bouts by professional boxers.
10:00—Great wrestlers, Hackenschmidt vs Metzetti; Tom Mix, motion picture star, referee.

As tribute to the heroic dead of the World War all activity in Glendale will cease at 9 o'clock this morning for two minutes. All residents of the city are asked to stand with bared heads from 9 a. m. until 9:02 a. m. Police officers on traffic duty will face west at this time, in memory of the boys who "went west" and five buglers will sound "taps." These buglers will be stationed on Brand boulevard at Colorado, Harvard, Wilson, Broadway and one at Central avenue and Broadway.

At the same time the body of an unknown soldier will be buried in Arlington Cemetery, Washington, D. C., with full military honors as a tribute to the unknown dead of the world war.

An addition to the Armistice Day parade is announced by the parade committee of the Glendale Post of the American Legion. It is the acquisition of the Pasadena Military Academy band. This band is rated as one of the best military school bands in the Southland.

There has been some change in the line of march for the parade and instead of disbanding at Harvard and Central, as originally planned, it will be disbanded at the high school on Myrtle field, where religious ceremonies will be held for a few minutes.

The revised line of march for the parade will be as follows: Leave Harvard at Central, south on Central to Colorado, east on Colorado to Brand, north on Brand to Broadway, east on Broadway to Glendale, countermarch Broadway to Brand, north on Brand to Wilson, countermarch on Brand to Harvard and east on Harvard to the high school.

Every minute of the day will be crowded from early morning until late at night. In the afternoon the Glendale High school will play the high school football team from Monrovia in the last game of the league season for Glendale. The game will be played on Myrtle field at the high school.

At night in addition to the regular performances of the Sheesley Shows, which will open in the afternoon for the amusement of the throngs expected to visit Glendale, John (Young) Hagenschmidt will wrestle "Butch" Metzetti for the best two out of three falls with no time limit set. This event will take place at the Sheesley Shows. Tom Mix, the movie star, will referee the bout.

WAYNE YARICK SHOT BY COMPANION IS IN BAD CONDITION

Six Perforations of Intestines From Bullet From 22 Calibre Rifle

Wayne Yarick, the 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Yarick, 347 West Wilson, is at the Glendale Sanitarium in a critical condition. Shortly after noon Thursday he was accidentally shot by a boy playmate, Richard Burk, living at 810 East Maple street, who playfully aimed a 22 calibre rifle at him which he supposed was not loaded.

Dr. Kaemmerling was called and had the injured boy at once conveyed to the hospital where an operation was performed which revealed six perforations of the intestines. He is a sturdy fellow with a great deal of vitality which it is hoped will sustain him until nature can rally to repair the damage.

Mr. Yarick, father of Wayne, is a member of the board of trustees of Glendale Union high school which Wayne has expected to enter next fall.

The sympathy of the community is with these parents in this trying hour, and the event has brought grief to the many friends of this very popular lad. At midnight last night the lad was resting comfortably as possible under the circumstances and seems to be making a brave fight.

Burning Corn for Fuel is Subject of Editorial Comment

Because farmers in the middle west are burning corn for fuel because it is cheaper for them to do so than burn coal an editorial tonight says that in some respects the generation seems not to be very intelligent.

In the next column Dr. Crane talks on "What of it?" and in another column James W. Foley shows that the man who knows and does his particular job is the man that makes the world go 'round.

Henry James in his comments speaks of the violation of contracts by clothiers who supplied uniforms to soldiers and General Wrangle's rejection of them.

Della Stewart has something to say about women and clubs and there are other features full of interest and information.

It is a good editorial page to become familiar with and it will give you food for reflection.

TUESDAY CLUB PAYS TRIBUTE LEGION QUEEN CONTEST

Congratulates Miss Yorba and Miss Morton, Two Winners in Contest

The Tuesday Afternoon Club wishes to congratulate Post No. 127, American Legion, upon the fair, consistent manner in which its recent queen contest was conducted, and at this time to extend congratulations to Miss Viola Yorba and Miss Dorothy Morton, acknowledging many past courtesies extended to the club by them, courtesies thoroughly appreciated by the membership.

To us this late affair was in no sense a contest but an excellent opportunity to show our boys our earnest desire to co-operate in whatever concerns the life and development of the Legion; and at this particular time because one of our members would allow us to use her name, help bring about the realization of our dearest wish, the materialization of a home for the post.

MRS. A. M. CILLIAMS, Chairman, Ways and Means Com.

GIRL SCOUTS MARCH IN PARADE TODAY

Girl Scouts under the leadership of Miss Gladys Sharpe will march in the Armistice Day parade in full regalia with formal uniform and insignia. They assemble at the corner of Wilson and Central and will be placed behind the Boy Scouts in Division 1. Margaret Longley is officer in command. Color bearers are Sara Chandler and Dorothy Houston, and color guards are Frances Betz and Fredericka Brown.

FIRE VOLLEY HONOR HEROIC SOLDIERS OF WORLD WAR

Glendale Company Will Pay Tribute—Sound Taps at Early Hour This Morning

Glendale companies of the California National Guard will accord full military honors to the Unknown Hero to be buried today in Arlington cemetery at Washington. A squad will report at the corner of Broadway and Brand at 8:45 a. m. equipped to fire a volley as the Unknown Hero is lowered to his last resting place.

Buglers will be stationed in various parts of the city: one at Brand boulevard and Broadway, one at Brand boulevard and Harvard, one at Brand and Colorado and one on the steps of the city hall. They will sound "taps" for the unknown dead who paid the supreme sacrifice and "went west" for the ideas that plunged the nation into the greatest war in the history of the world.

At 8:59 the sirens on the Los Angeles Baskett company and Tile company buildings will blow and all activity will cease. Street cars will stop and business will be at a standstill for two minutes while the citizens stand with bared heads in memory of our boys who died for Democracy. The firing squad, in the middle of the street at Brand boulevard and Broadway will face the east and fire three volleys and the buglers will sound "taps" as the soldiers of the guard will stand at "present arms."

KNIGHTS PYTHIAS WILL HAVE FLOAT

Will Picture Scene From Damon and Pythias—Take Part in Parade

Glendale, Lodge No. 331 of Knights of Pythias is represented in the parade today by a large float representing a scene from the drama "Damon and Pythias." This lodge is growing rapidly in membership and expects to have 300 members in this city by December 31.

Meetings are held every Tuesday at 8 p. m. at the Castle Hall, corner of Park avenue and Brand boulevard, where visitors are cordially received. It is claimed by the Chancellor Commander E. E. Fram that there are 1000 Pythians living in Glendale. The greater portion of the knights expect to affiliate with the Glendale lodge soon.

Next Tuesday night the Knight Rank will be conferred and on Tuesday, November 23, a musical harmony entertainment, under the direction of Past Grand Chancellor Robert G. Loucks is scheduled. This meeting will be open to Knights only and will be of unusual merit. The annual election of officers will be held on Tuesday evening, December 31.

President Harding's Armistice Greetings To American Legion

President Warren G. Harding has sent out the following greeting to all members of the American Legion as his Armistice day message to that great body of ex-service men:

"It is a pleasure and a privilege to comply with the many requests that have come to me for an Armistice day message to the American Legion posts. The civic and patriotic activities of the Legion have been generally such as to commend its leaders and membership. The Legion has been plainly moved in peace time by the same fine ideals that inspired its members in the days of war; and our country will be fortunate, through a long future, if these high purposes shall continue to animate it. Especially would I commend the spirit of mutual service, of community usefulness, of charity and beneficence, that has been displayed so uniformly. We need patriotism tempered by charity for the views of others; zealous loyalty that shall always remember the duty of liberality in opinion and freedom in expression. These I am sure will be encompassed among the aims of the American Legion, insuring continuance and increase in the sentiment of gratitude which the whole nation entertains for these who have no magnificently served it."

Line of March For Glendale Armistice Day Parade

The parade will start at 10 o'clock sharp and travel along the following route:

LINE OF MARCH

Leave Harvard and Central, south on Central to Colorado, east on Colorado to Brand, north on Brand to Broadway, east on Broadway to Glendale, countermarch Broadway to Brand, north on Brand to Wilson, countermarch on Brand to Broadway, west on Broadway to Central, south on Central to Colorado, east on Colorado to southeast entrance of High school athletic field, where religious ceremonies will be held.

FIRST DIVISION

The first division will be composed of the following organizations of Glendale:

City Council, Police, Colors and Guard, American Legion Band, American Legion, Thornycroft Veterans, American Legion Queen, Women's Auxiliary of American Legion, National Guard, G. A. R., Women's Relief Corps, Sons of Veterans, Daughters of Veterans, D. A. R., Red Cross, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Campfire Girls, High School, Grammar Schools and Parent-Teacher Association. This division will report to D. W. Nicoles or Jesse Smith at 9:30 a. m. at Harvard and Central.

SECOND DIVISION

The second division will form at Hawthorne street, east of Central, and will report to Lieutenants Jones and Edwards. This division will be made up of the fraternal organizations, as follows:

B. P. O. E., Silver Star band from the Knights of Pythias Lodge, Knights of Pythias lodge, Pythian Sisters, Yeomen and A. O. U. W., Knights of Columbus.

THIRD DIVISION

The third division, composed of civic organizations, will report to Lieutenants Wittmeyer and Bullis at Hawthorne street on the west side of Central, and is as follows:

FOURTH DIVISION

The fourth division is the Sheesley Shows.

MRS. BACHMAN PUTS PROTEST UP TO CITY

Declares Would Damage Her Property in Vicinity of Reservoir

Gertrude M. Bachman presented a petition to the Council Thursday night protesting against opening Raleigh Street. Mrs. Bachman said that already the Tropic Reservoir and the city dump were near her place and that if the street is widened it will be necessary for the city to use a strip of her land valued by her at $2,000.

In a note attached to the protest, Mrs. Bachman said that if the city will agree to reimburse her for the property required to open and widen Raleigh Street and agree to remove the reservoir within a reasonable time, she will withdraw her protest. It was decided that a public hearing of all protests regarding opening this street is required and the date for the hearing was set for November 23 at the regular meeting of the Council.

BRITISH CABINET HAVE IRISH CASE

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Irish situation was to be placed before the whole British cabinet at a special session called for four o'clock this afternoon. Preliminary to this meeting, government leaders conferred in Downing Street. Members of the Ulster cabinet gathered at the Hotel Savoy, where receipt of Premier Lloyd George's written proposals for a settlement were expected momentarily.

INSANELY JEALOUS

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 10.—Francis Scott Key, lineal descendant of the author of the Star Spangled Banner, today filed suit for divorce from his wife, Mrs. Edith Estelle Key, charging that she was insanely jealous and had accused him of association with "other women."

ORDINANCE COVER CESSPOOL DIGGING

Would Separate Cess-Pool Inspection From Plumbing Inspection

An ordinance was introduced at the meeting of the Council Thursday night in the matter of issuing of permits for plumbing, gas fitting and digging of cess-pools. The intent of the ordinance is to require a separate permit for digging cess-pools. It is now the custom of Building Superintendent Marek to issue a permit to build at the same time the plumbing permit is issued, collecting both the one fee. The purpose of this ordinance is to require that the digging of a cess-pool be allowed on a separate permit, and the cess-pool contractor be held responsible for the work. In the past the plumber passed the responsibility to the cess-pool contractor and the cess-pool contractor passed it back to the plumber in the event that the inspector had reason to condemn the work.

The ordinance was held over for one week and a report from Building Inspector Marek as to whether the fee received for the extra permit would cover the necessary cost of issuing same is to be forthcoming.

BICYCLE THIEVES ARE ACTIVE AGAIN

Bicycle thieves are again busy in Glendale. Wednesday they stole two bicycles, one from Arthur Sherbourne, employee of a local paper, and another from Herbert Jepson, 420 Lincoln avenue. H. H. Jepson, father of the boy who reported his wheel stolen, also reported that some one had stolen two axes and a pair of pruning shears from his wagon, which was standing at the intersection of Adams and Broadway on Wednesday afternoon.

AUXILIARY TAKES PART IN PARADE OF LEGION TODAY

Active Branch of Legion Here Is Doing Much For Aid of Disabled Men

MRS. JAMES F. MCBRYDE

Conspicuous in the parade today and property so, will be the representation of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion composed of mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of the men who forsook all to follow the flag. These were the loyal souls who sent loved ones to battle, with smiles that hid breaking hearts, whose prayers followed them, and whose never-idle fingers worked without ceasing to provide such comfort as was possible even to the supplying of the tobacco to which under normal conditions they were conscientiously opposed.

The Glendale post was organized about two years ago. It is non-political and non-sectarian. Its aim and object is promotion of the welfare of the American Legion and of all ex-service men. One of its most active committees concerns itself with the comfort and pleasures of the disabled veterans at Thornycroft. It invites to membership all women who are eligible and seeks the co-operation of the public in its work.

The officers are Mrs. James F. McBryde, president; Mrs. E. U. Emery, vice-president; Mrs. G. D. Rowe, secretary; Miss Wauvity Emery, treasurer.

JEWEL ROBBERY IS REPORTED POLICE

Home of Julius Rieman Robbed Wednesday of Over $200 in Jewels

A jewel robbery was reported to the police department Wednesday night by Julius Rieman, who lives at 1607 Gardena avenue. He told the police that the family was absent from home between 6:30 and 10:30 p. m., and when they returned the house had been entered and a quantity of jewelry taken. This is the second jewelry robbery reported within two days. The other robbery was the apartment of James McBryde.

According to an estimate by Mr. Rieman, the value of the jewels stolen from his home was more than $200. Officers found that the thieves had entered the house through a screen door, from which they had cut the wire. After they opened the screen door a skeleton key was used to open the rear door through which they entered the house.

MAY CUT SALARIES

DENVER, Nov. 10.—State employees may have to accept a temporary 6 per cent reduction in wages because of lack of funds in the state treasury. Unusually heavy appropriations have depleted the funds. Unless permission is obtained to use some of the school and insurance moneys, the temporary reduction will be necessary.

LEGION TAKES CENTER STAGE OVER NATION

For God and For Country Men Take Oath of Allegiance

GLENDALE IS FOURTH

Is Fourth in Size in This District With 300 Members on Roll

"For God and Country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one-hundred-percent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the great war; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

The Legion has no purposes, policies or activities which are not covered by this preamble. The American Legion stands for Service: service to the ex-service man and service to the country.

The Legion was born of a meeting of the General Staff of the A. E. F. in Paris, February 16, 1918. This meeting was adjourned to meet in caucus at St. Louis, Mo., April 8, 9 and 10, 1919. The organization was perfected at this caucus and the first convention was held in Minneapolis, Minn., November, 9, 10 and 11, 1919.

Since its organization the Legion has grown until today it numbers 2,500,000 members, has 10,000 posts and 70 departments. There are 16,000 units of the Women's Auxiliary with 200,000 members. The Legion publishes the American Legion Weekly, a magazine with 100,000 subscribers and is also publishing 50 other publications. A magnificent Legion home has been erected in Indianapolis that is a monument to the spirit of the American soldier to which all things are possible.

Glendale Post No. 127 of the American Legion is the fourth post in the Congressional district, ranked according to size. There are 300 members in the Glendale Post. Pasadena ranks first, Long Beach second, and Pomona third.

MRS. SOUTHARD NOW IN STATE'S PRISON

Says Newspaper Men Are All Alike, and Will Not Talk With Them

BOISE, Ida., Nov. 10.—Mrs. Lyda Southard, convicted at Twin Falls of the murder of her fourth husband, Edward F. Meyer, Wednesday evening entered the penitentiary here. While she will be known to the world as "Mrs. Southard, the woman blue-bearded," at the penitentiary she is simply prisoner No. 3052. Mrs. Southard entered the penitentiary in a seemingly "defiant, don't care" spirit. When seen by a representative of the Capital-News shortly after her arrival in Boise last evening, Mrs. Southard, when asked if she had any statement to make, said:

"I don't care to talk to no newspaper men. I have found them all alike since leaving Honolulu and they make me responsible for statements I never made. There was one down at Twin Falls I trusted, but I did not tell him anything I did not want him to know." A report from the penitentiary was to the effect that she had a good night, and seemed to be taking prison life without the least fuss.

MAJOR ROGERS MAY SOON BE RESTORED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Secretary of War Weeks was today ordered by Justice Stafford of the district supreme court to show cause November 28 why a writ of mandamus should not be issued against him compelling him to vacate an order of Newton D. Baker placing Major Wilbur Rogers on the retired list. Major Rogers, who was formerly a lieutenant colonel states that he was retired by Baker January 26, without the right of a hearing. Major Rogers served 12 years in the field artillery of the regular army.

GERALDINE GOING AHEAD WITH DIVORCE

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Arguments before Justice Guy in the New York supreme court here this afternoon on a motion by attorneys for Geraldine Farrar, famous star of the Metropolitan Opera company, revealed the first time that Miss Farrar has actually served upon her husband, Lou Tellegen, the actor, notice of suit for a divorce. This was Miss Farrar's counter action to the suit for separation filed several months ago by Tellegen. She asks absolute divorce.

MRS. FERN ROBERTS ENTERTAINS CHAPTER

An all-day meeting of Chapter L of the P. E. O. was held Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Fern Roberts on East Elk avenue.

The morning was devoted to business and the roll call was answered by quotations and current events. Short talks were given by visiting members, and a delicious luncheon was served, the hostesses being Fern Roberts, May Emery, May Dickman and Josephine Farnham.

As it was the time chosen by the chapter to observe educational day, an educational playlet was given by some of the members, those taking part being Josephine Bryant, Edith Huntley, Elizabeth Read, Jessie Russell, Waunita Emery, Charlotte Goss, Margaret Campbell, Letitia Lusby and Genevieve Goss. A nice sum was contributed to the educational fund.

Mrs. Patience Beatty, supreme officer of the board of trustees for the educational fund was a guest and gave a very interesting and instructive talk about the work. Other guests were Mrs. Weissner of Chapter A of Denver, all the members of Chapter C. J. of Glendale, Mrs. Webster of A. H., Mrs. Cooper of B. A., and Mrs. Albert Pearce.

A good deal of sewing was accomplished by the ladies for the True Love home.

WAR MOTHERS WEPE WITH MRS. SHERWOOD

The Glendale Chapter of War Mothers met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Sherwood, 357 West Broadway, to sew on orders she had given them and for which she is paying as a benefit to the chapter treasury. They will meet again next Wednesday at the same place.

The use of a Hudson car has been donated to the chapter for the Armistice Day parade. It will be decorated with the national colors and the dove of peace and officers of the organization will occupy it.

READING CIRCLE MET YESTERDAY

The Mutual Benefit Reading Circle met Wednesday at the city library. The review, which was given by Mrs. C. H. Crawford, covered a magazine article entitled "The Comedy of Americanization."

Mrs. H. V. Henry read "The Amazing Armistice" by Arthur Hornblow which concerned the premature press report of the armistice made November 8, 1918.

The regular reading from the book "All the Children of All the People" was continued, the chapter read dealing with the problem of making good citizens of children. The next meeting will be the annual reunion of old members for which a special program is being prepared.

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR GLENN CORNWELL

Glenn Allen Cornwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cornwell, 343 North Central avenue, celebrated his first birthday Wednesday with a little party at which contemporary babies and their mothers were guests. It was an entirely informal social afternoon devoted chiefly to playing with the babies, and at the close ice cream and cake were served to the mothers. The refreshment table being decorated with the baby colors—pink and white, with sweet peas, the nut baskets being in pink. The guests were Mrs. M. Chandler and daughter Virginia Irene, Mrs. H. M. Wiebe and daughter Marian Gertrude, Mrs. I. A. Robinson and daughter Laura Jean, Mrs. H. Lynch and son Edward Chester and daughter Margaret, Mrs. William Tatham, Mrs. J. F. Hunt and Miss May Cornwell.

KENSINGTON CLUB WITH MRS. MILLER

The Kensington Club, a social auxiliary of the Women's Relief Corps, met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Ella Miller, 324 West Milford street. It was called to order by the president, Mrs. Juliana Hayes, who has just returned from the East after an absence of four months, and who was warmly welcomed, as she is much beloved. She gave a talk on other corps she had visited and the social work they are doing. A discussion which resulted in a decision to hold followed relative to work in Glendale the next meeting of the club on November 30 instead of in December, and to make it an all-day session, each lady bringing lunch and prepared to work on tying quilts and comforters to be given to the Eyer-green Home and other institutions in which the club is interested.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Tinscher, Mrs. Milligan and others.

BUSINESS WOMEN WILL BE IN PARADE

Members of the Business Women's Club are being advised that the official automobile of their organization for the Armistice Day parade, which is decorated by the committee appointed for that purpose, will follow the float of the Tuesday Afternoon Club and the automobiles in attendance which are to be stationed on Hawthorne west of Central at 9:30 Friday morning.

It is expected that a train of private automobiles owned by members will follow the official machine and for these, runners designating them as representatives of the Business Women's Club, will be provided, to be placed on the windshields.

LUCILE GRACE THOMAS FORMALLY CHRISTENED

Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Jack Thomas of the White Inn had their youngest daughter of four months christened by Rev. James Stenson of Omaha, Neb. The little one was named Lucile Grace Thomas, and is the second child they have adopted.

Father Stenson is the priest who married Mr. and Mrs. Thomas 16 years ago. Following the christening, a five-course dinner was served, the guests being Father Stenson, Mr. and Mrs. Carey Brain, Mr. Brousseau and daughter, Emma, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Check of Los Angeles.

PRESENT PETITION FOR MEMBERSHIP

Wednesday evening Mrs. Margaret Biggs, president of the Glendale Business and Professional Women's Club, attended a meeting of the county federation of business women's clubs and presented the application for membership of her organization. It was received with the greatest cordiality and the club is now identified with the county organization.

A meeting of the executive committee of the club will be held tonight in the office of Dr. Laura Brown in the First National Bank building.

TROPICO DELEGATES GO TO ANAHEIM

Quite a delegation from the Tropico Presbyterian church attended Tuesday night the Sunday school convention, in session at Anaheim, to witness a most interesting pageant of Sunday school work put on there.

The party included H. E. Fry, Mrs. S. E. Brown, Mrs. Rosenberg, Miss Helen Hartwig, Miss Phoebe Snell, Mrs. Clair Van Etten, Mrs. Ferber and son, John, Dr. Harry St. Clair and Mrs. H. G. Goldsborough. Miss Tirza Snell is attending all the sessions of the convention, which closes tonight.

TWO INITIATED INTO GIRL SCOUTS

Bagley and Fredericka Brown, Proud Scouts Tuesday evening at the Congregational Church, two tender-foot scouts were invested—Dorothy Potter and Alice Hill. Also invested were two second class scouts—Alexandria Bagley and Fredericka Brown. Poudcest of all was the troop over the investiture of Amy Bambridge as first-class scout because it means conscientious work and calls for five merit badges, one being a test in community service. To secure this Amy spent an afternoon in the office of City Manager Reeves assisting his secretary, Miss Lois Mock, thus qualifying and earning the merit credit.

Thirty members of the troop were present and at the close of the session lemonade was served by the refreshment committee of which Ruth Dana was chairman.

PRESBYTERIAN LADIES GIVE FINE SUPPER

A most delicious supper was served by the ladies of the Tropico Presbyterian church, in the Sunday school room of the church Wednesday evening, which was much enjoyed by a goodly crowd. Quite a number of strangers were present.

After supper, Dr. Blue, of Pasadena, who is Moderator and supply, called on Mrs. L. E. Richardson who gave a report on the work of the school of missions, which was very interesting and the work accomplished most gratifying.

Dr. Blue then introduced Col. Griffith of Pasadena, who outlined the work of the men of Utica, N. Y., who first united for the work of their individual church and then in an organization of all the churches.

This talk was followed by a talk on the Sunday school work of the church, by Mr. Wilcox, assistant superintendent. Then Mrs. Wilcox told of the work being done along the line of Christian education.

LEASE POWER PLANT AT MUSCLE SHOALS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Secretary of War Weeks announced today that he had leased to the Alabama Power Company power plant No. 2 of the Muscle Shoals project. The lease is indefinite, to be cancelled in 30 days' notice. The terms of the lease are $10,000 a month for the plant and two cents per kilowatt hour. Weeks said that the lease of the power plant does not conflict with the offer of Henry Ford or any one else.

PRODUCTIVE LANDS SPENT ARMISTICE SHOULD NOT BE OVERLOOKED

Reavis Gives Sound Tip of Things For This Growing City

BY JOHN D. REAVIS,

Of the Glendale Realty Exchange.
In the process of building a city like Glendale there is a certain basic principal which must not be overlooked, namely, that the independence and future success depends upon the method adopted now, while the wave of incoming settlers is creating unexampled prosperity. At present new money, new blood and new found enthusiasm of the newcomer serves as a veritable spring of optimism and opens daily channels for extensive expansion and increasing values, both of business enterprises and realty.

Houses are rising in all directions and the evidences are seen of what undoubtedly is one of the greatest, sincerest and most impressive city unfoldments in the history of Southern California.

This wonderful growth, sustained by the daily addition of new people, new home owners and business people, all fresh from business triumphs in less favored sections of the United States, must be matched by an adequate effort on the part of Glendale to provide fundamental sources of income to make permanent the present social and business structure.

First and greatest of all sources of wealth is husbandry, which includes farm land, farm products, clay, clay products, oils, minerals and other natural sources of wealth. In Glendale should be centered a representative class of agricultural tourists, who through modern methods derive their incomes from the soil. Glendale is very close to many farming districts, the equal of which can scarcely be found in the world. These include the San Fernando Valley, where good land in small tracts can still be obtained for $500 per acre; Lancaster Valley, where alfalfa land, with water at easy pumping levels, still sells as low as $50 per acre, and the Beaumont-Eden Springs district, in Riverside county, where thousands of choice acres adapted to growing fruit and grain and stock raising are readily obtainable at $50 to $200 an acre.

From these lands, properly cultivated, Glendale people can derive an independence that is as enduring as the earth itself, and will help to make Glendale's economic condition for all time to come.

Glendale should keep her mind open to the investigation of manufacturing enterprises with due regard to the increasing demand on the Pacific coast for all products of the mill, mine and factory.

LEGION TAKES UP CENTER OF STAGE

bond issue for soldier compensation placed on the next national ballot and is bending every effort to that end. In connection with its work of caring for the veterans of this district the Glendale Post is assisting the Red Cross in every possible manner to accomplish the stupendous task of that organization in the rehabilitation of the former soldier and the caring for destitute families.

At the first convention held in Minneapolis the Legion renewed the drive against the slackers and deserters from the American army and were responsible for thousands of these being brought to justice. The education of all aliens who subscribed to American principles and the deportation of those who refused to do this was urged at the convention.

The so-called "Gentleman's agreement" with Japan came under fire at the convention and the abrogation of this agreement was asked. The adjusted compensation plan was espoused by the Legion at this time and universal military training was advocated and a plea made to abolish a large army in times of peace.

At the second convention, held in Cleveland, government agencies were condemned for their failure to deport alien slackers from America and advocated the publication of the names of all slackers and deserters. Japanese exclusion from America was favorably voted on and plans for the aiding of disabled veterans were discussed.

The district and department meetings of the Legion have done much in the matter of re-employment of veterans and having them reinstated in their pre-war positions. The service division has attended to the matters of adjusting compensations for the veterans, vocational training, caring for their war risk insurance, allotments and Liberty bonds. This service is extended to all disabled veterans of the world war, whether they are members of the Legion or not. Another important work that is being done by the Service division is the looking after the hospitalization of disabled veterans. Complaints regarding the treatment of veterans in hospitals have been investigated and when improvements were needed the Legion ordered such improvements made and saw to it that they were made.

The Legislative committee of the Legion carried the passage of the Sweet bill securing with it an appropriation of $90,000,000 to raise the compensation of disabled veterans from $30 a month to $40. This committee has secured $90,000,000 for the world war and secured $125,000,000 for death and disability compensations.

Through the efforts of the Legislative committee the court martial laws of the United States army have been improved to a great extent. Ex-service men have been accorded first choice in all service positions and have had 30,000 acres of land thrown open to them for homesteading in Arizona. The committee has also had the Fordney four-fold compensation bill passed through the House of Representatives along with the Mason

Captain Thomas D. Watson, commander of Company M of the National Guard, was with the A. E. F. in France as an officer in the Eighth Infantry Regiment of the Eighth Division. He was sent to France with this regiment as a first lieutenant on October 18, 1918, making the trip on the Leviathan, formerly the Vaterland, the largest ship afloat at that time.

Before sailing for France as billeting officer for the Sixty-second Regiment, Lieutenant Watson was at Camp Lewis, training recruits in the 36th Infantry. When he was assigned to the Sixty-second Regiment, he and two other officers were sent to France as a billeting detail in advance of the division.

The Sixty-second Infantry Regiment was held in the United States and Lieutenant Watson was transferred to the Eighth Regiment where he was detailed to duty as billeting officer. He was placed in charge of five towns, having his headquarters in Jonzac, where he was town major and responsible for the billeting of troops and for any property damage done by troops.

When General Helmick, commander of Lieutenant Watson's regiment, was placed in charge of the port of debarkation at Brest, his regiment was sent to that port. Lieutenant Watson remained in Jonzac to settle all claims were settled. Lieutenant Watson took a motorcycle sidecar and went to Bordeaux, where he remained until November 8. On November 8 he went to Paris, arriving there on the morning of November 10. On the night of November 10, the Parisians received word that the Armistice was signed, to take effect on the morning of the 11th at 11 o'clock, and the city went wild with joy. A premature celebration was held but, according to Captain Watson, the real celebration was held the next day.

At 11 o'clock, when the Armistice became effective, every man, woman and child quit work and a monster parade was organized. Americans were hailed as deliverers and were forced to join the parade and succeeding festivities. Captain Watson said: "The whole celebration was thrilling. It was thrilling to see the citizens of Paris who had lived in daily fear of their beautiful city falling into the hands of the German foe for the past four years, throw aside their fear and enter into the spirit of the celebration. The most thrilling and inspiring sight, however, was at night, when all of the lights of the city that, previous to the war, had been one of the best illuminated cities in the world, but had, for the past four years, been a city of darkness, burst suddenly into a blaze of light that reminded one of a fairyland come true."

"When darkness fell the city remained in darkness for some time, and then at a signal every light was turned on. The effect was wonderful and people who had for four years borne only an expression of patient sadness, were wreathed with smiles. While some were smiling and shouting with joy, there were others who wept at the sight of their beloved Paris, for four years a city of darkness, ablaze with lights and the citizens celebrating with all their old-time spirit and enthusiasm multiplied a hundredfold!"

On November 12, Captain Watson, then ranking as a lieutenant, returned to Brest and was put in charge of organizing casual companies as commanding officer. At one time he had direct charge of more than 1700 men. On July 25, 1919, Captain Watson left France for the United States on the steamer Mt. Vernon, another ship formerly owned by Germany but confiscated by the United States. He was discharged on September 1, 1919, at the Presidio near San Francisco.

SCHULTE DRUG STORE WILL BE OPENED

On this Armistice Day Glendale's mercantile circles welcome a new drug store. This time it is the fine new store of J. J. Schulte, located at the corner of Brand and California. Mr. Schulte is a druggist of many years experience. He comes from Minneapolis, Minn., and in addition to opening a very attractive place of business has already purchased a home in Glendale. He is quite satisfied with the new city of his choice.

The work of fostering Americanism is carried on by the entire Legion acting as a body and attending to the work of Americanizing of the immigrant in America and the routing of Bolshevism. Work such as this is undertaken by the American Legion and Glendale Post No. 127 is doing its share in the work. The former service man is assisted whenever it is possible whether he is a member of the Legion or not.

Truths in Epigram

Volumes might be written upon the impiety of the pious. — Herbert Spencer (1829-1903).

The greatest chastisement that man may receive who hath outraged another, is to have done the outrage; and there is no man so rudely punished as he that is subject to the whip of his own repentance. — Seneca (4 B. C.-65 A. D.).

COMPROMISE VERDICTS

One Mrs. Southard of Idaho was tried for killing her fourth husband by poison. Incidental to the trial was the information that three other husbands had gone hence by similar method. Also that certain relatives who had dropped into the danger zone, had to be carried out to the neighborhood cemetery.

The jury brought in a verdict finding the woman guilty of murder in the second degree. This must be regarded as a compromise. Perhaps where justice cannot have her perfect work, it is better to let her pile up a record of 50 per cent capacity than to score a blank.

When a woman, first seeing to it that the man upon whose protecting arm she leans confidently is insured in her favor, then uses fly poison on him, she either is guilty of murder in the first degree, or nothing. If she is not guilty, it follows that one of the privileges of domesticity is to fly-paper the head of the house sufficiently to render the insurance collectable. This lends the zest of risk to the marital alliance.

Doubtless this verdict was due to the reluctance to convict a woman. Some soft hearted or soft headed juror probably declined to vote for the proper degree of conviction, and the others had to compromise, or have the woman turned loose in the community where flypaper still is to be obtained. This course would have been rash as husband No. 5 still lingers near, and is known to be insured.

BURNING CORN

Farmers in the middle west are burning corn for fuel. In sections where corn is cheap, coal is scarce, or high in price and of poor quality. It seems anomalous, but it is true, that farmers are saving money when they fill their stoves with the golden grain.

Coal miners are threatening the land with a shortage. They should bear in mind that farmers can't be frozen while the corn crib is well stocked, but that the miner himself has no corn to burn.

Despite the fact that the corn consumed in this fashion does not represent a large sum in money to the individual, the aggregate is large, and the whole of it is worse than mere waste. While the corn of Iowa and Nebraska turns to ashes, there are millions suffering for lack of food. The corn, put to wiser uses, would be the means of saving many lives. While charity feeds the famished Russians, it would be able to afford greater relief if it had access to the products of corn.

But no, the farmer needs the corn to warm his house. If he could get coal he would much prefer the coal. Labor rates and freight rates prevent his use of this natural and abundant fuel. If he didn't need to burn his corn, worthy persons might be cured of hunger.

In some respects the generation seems not to be very intelligent. It produces food and destroys it. It might produce plenty of coal, but declines to do so. It has not learned how to distribute its output even in its own country.

A RECALTRANT MAYOR

Mayor Thompson of Chicago has been severely rebuked by Secretary Hoover. The letter of censure is courteous, and therefore the sting of its sentences is more acute. Mr. Hoover stands in such light before the country that there must be general acceptance of his attitude.

The offense of the mayor in this instance, was his refusal to co-operate in the matter of relieving the unemployed. He denounced the plan as a capitalistic move with the object of compiling a blacklist, of refusing charity to American union laboring men, a drive against union labor, and a conspiracy to lower wages.

Thompson is understood to have done fairly well in relation to some matters purely local to Chicago. So far as his wider activities are concerned they have not won respect for the man or his principles. In the war he was pro-German. Since the war, it is evident that he has no sympathy with the victims of conditions that in large measure grew out of the great conflict.

The charges that Thompson brought were against all fact or reason. They ignored the real purpose, which was to find work for idle workers. Much has been accomplished, and owing to these concerted efforts, in which Thompson declined to participate, the situation is steadily improving.

It may be illuminating to add that the American Federation of Labor, the railway brotherhoods, and the organized mine workers were among the supporters of the project. It is not believed that any of these bodies favors a blacklist, or is particularly devoted to the scheme of lowering wages.

THE GREAT CONFERENCE

From this time until after the conference, that important and august assemblage will be the center of attention. Compared with its significance, other concerns even those affecting the destinies of nations, assume secondary place, or pass from immediate consideration.

It is a fortunate thing for the public that the proceedings will be scrutinized at first hand by men and women of fine minds, of acute sympathies, and with the power to express lucidly and with force, the vision that may be unfolded to them.

Among these correspondents may be mentioned H. C. Wells of England and Ida Tarbell of the United States, both great thinkers, students and writers. Happily George Bernhard Shaw, invited to be among the scribes present, declined. The absence of his sneer, and his petty innuendoes, will go far towards keeping unclouded the public view of proceedings.

Mr. Wells approaches his task in a spirit of pessimism that is to be regretted. He seems almost determined that his dire prophecies of old shall be verified. He said civilization was going to smash, and with deep melancholy and yet with intense interest, friendly as mournful, he is posing to watch the catastrophe eventuate out of his forebodings. His American admirers beg him to be less fearful. There is a chance yet.

That if the nations of the earth were to engage in another world war, civilization would be at an end is clear. The integrity of the structure could not endure the impact of a world's loosed passions. Science has gone too far in the contriving of instrumentalities of destruction. Society would disintegrate, culture would vanish, the visible tokens of human progress would disappear. These are propositions not easy to dispute. The truth of them seems self evident. But they do not augur the end. On the contrary, the augury is for an understanding that shall make such a war impossible.

There is no nation now so filled with pride and ambition as to desire to dominate the globe. There is no nation so blind to the truth as not to understand that it could not fight a powerful neighbor without grave danger of engaging the activities of the whole group of nations. When this has occurred "Finis" will be blazed across the skies, and the stars look down upon chaos. Therefore the nations, even if not opposed to murder and arson, as they have learned to be, would be cautious; because unquestionably opposed to suicide.

The world at heart is as sound as ever it was. The same forces that builded a civilization continue. They still may be applied to preservation of the edifice already reared, and to making it stronger.

The contention of Mr. Wells that civilization is sinking because Russia is sinking is not acceptable. Russia is in its present extreme because of specific and recognizable causes. These causes do not bear upon the world at large. Their effects in Russia are manifest in famine and inept government, the spectacle appealing to general sympathy. And the case of Russia, most desperate to be cited in behalf of the Wells pessimism, doubtless is subject to remedy. Great things are expected of the conference. Great things must come of it. The issue is life or death.

Somebody expresses fear that if nations do not disarm they will be exterminated, and yet that if they do disarm, Islam will sweep them out of existence. For a man who entertains so morose a view there could be suggested no relief other than by going down to the dock, exclaiming "Goodbye weak and wobbly world" and jumping off.

Announcement is made that packers are to open retail shops and thus abolish middlemen, meaning retail butchers. It is true that the retailers have not brought their prices down to accord with wholesale prices, and discipline might be good for their souls. At the same time confidence in the packers as middlemen has not reached any high pitch, and it is feared that in such roles they would be very like any other middlemen.

WHAT OF IT?

By DR. FRANK CRANE

In the interesting play, "Just Suppose," the heir apparent to the throne of a European monarchy, while on a visit to the United States, gets tired of the endless ceremonies and formality of his entertainment and runs away for a few days. He finds his way to a country place in Virginia where he proceeds to fall violently in love with a young lady.

After a few days the old ambassador, who is in charge of the prince and his expedition, discovers him. The seasoned old diplomat, delicately but firmly represents to the young man the folly of his actions. He tells him that he has caused the members of his party great trouble and anxiety because they did not know where he had gone and feared that something might have happened to him. He concludes by asking:

"Why did you do it?" The young prince replies, "Why, I was bored." To which the ambassador replied with a famous line: "Will Your Highness permit one who has been bored for forty years to inquire: 'What of it?'"

There are some phrases that are haunting. They are genetic. This is one of them. All sorts of mottoes have been printed to hang up in the home and in the office. But it seems to me this would be best of all: "What of it?"

People ought to look at that every day and ask themselves that question in all conjunctions. You have had a quarrel with your wife and the tension about the house is very much strained. Why not stop, carefully define the subject of your dispute and ask yourselves: "What of it?"

If you are worrying about something that your children do, perhaps your worries would cease if you would ask yourself, "After all, what of it?" Somebody's done you a bad turn, some one has betrayed your confidence and shaken your faith in human nature, some one has stolen money from you, some one has lied, about you—well, "What of it?"

The art of life is to know what to worry about and to worry hard; that is one half; the other half of the art of life is to know what is not worth worrying about and when such questions come up to ask yourself, "What of it?"

The question might even be extended to your entire life and its contents; for is the thing that you want most with all your heart worth winning?

There are some objects men pursue and think that life will not be worth while unless they obtain them. Yet these objects are wholly trivial. When the man of common sense hears most of the complaints of self-pitying souls, most of the heavy discussions in political circles and most of the quarrels among ecclesiastics, he is apt to say to himself what the old diplomat said to the prince:

"What of it?"

THE LISTENING POST

Down under ground a grimy faced man with an electric light on his hat operates a machine. It looks like a square black box, and in front of it is a narrow apron of steel projecting like a tongue stuck out of your mouth.

It is a heavy black box, made of steel, and it contains an electric motor. And it carries its own railroad track like a tank. Indeed, it is a tank of the underground.

The narrow apron like a tongue stuck out of your mouth projects six feet forward from the box. And around the apron is an endless chain. Which carries steel teeth set at nine different angles.

And when the black box is in position, and the motor set in operation, the steel teeth revolve with the endless chain about the apron. And the end of the tongue is thrust into a vein of shining mineral. Coal.

And as the chain revolves carrying the steel teeth, a vein of coal twenty-five feet in width is "undercut."

As you might draw a string through a cheese. For the teeth eat into the vein to a depth of six feet, and back and forth to a width of twenty-five feet.

All this is going on 500 feet below the surface of the earth.

You would have walked along on the surface of the earth not knowing at all what was going on down underneath.

Not knowing about the electric lamps or the grimy men or the black box or the revolving chain or the steel teeth.

There are many things going on in the world that you know not or only dimly realize.

It is only by traveling to all kinds of places and seeing all sorts of things and asking all kinds of questions that you find out.

For much learning comes by travel and observation.

In olden days a grimy man sat on his haunches and pecked away the coal at the bottom of the vein.

It was a slow and hard and laborious process. And then somebody invented an electric coal cutter.

Which is the black box of which we speak. It travels on its own track and it has power to plow its way through dust and mud and it does the work of many men.

After the vein of coal has been undercut the men who operate the black box move to another place.

And other grimy men come with more lamps in their hats and great augers and bore holes at intervals from the top of the vein toward the bottom.

Until the vein of coal stands undercut for a depth of six feet and a width of twenty-five feet, and with holes bored at intervals. The operator of the black box makes not a false move down there in the dark.

He manipulates and directs and moves his cutter about and loads it up and drives it to another place as skillfully as the experienced driver directs a motor car on a highway.

BECAUSE THAT IS HIS JOB.

Then the miner comes and bores his holes in just the right place.

BECAUSE THAT IS HIS JOB.

And then he leaves charges of explosive at the bottom of the undercut vein and moves on to other work.

And at five o'clock when the miners have all left the mine another man comes.

He puts the charges of explosive into the augured holes in just the right quantity.

Then he retires a distance and discharges the explosive with an electric contact.

And there is a muffled roar and a lot of dust and down comes coal rent into pieces of different size.

Tons and tons of it at each discharge. And all night long the explosives are discharged. The man who fires the shot knows just what to do.

BECAUSE THAT IS HIS JOB.

And in the morning the miner comes and finds the coal lying in heaps in the dark chamber. And he loads it into cars and it is drawn out along a mile or a mile and a half of tramway into the open.

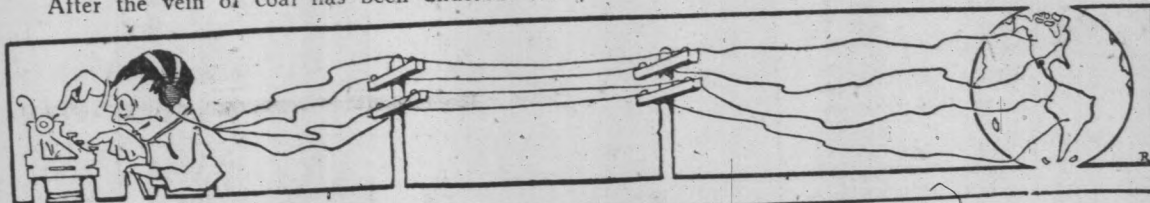

So every man has his job. And knows it. And does it.

The cutter and the miner and the shot-firer and the rest of them.

All down 500 feet underground. And every day through the world hundreds of thousands of men go down into the earth.

Cut and drill and auger and fire and blow down and load and haul.

To bring the lumps of coal to your bin. JAMES W. FOLEY.

SONGS OF THE POETS

Gifts.—By James Thomson (1834-1882)

Give a man a horse he can ride.
Give a man a boat he can sail;
And his rank and wealth, his strength and health,
On sea nor shore shall fail.

Give a man a pipe he can smoke.
Give a man a book he can read:

And his home is bright with a calm delight,
Though the room be poor indeed.

Give a man a girl he can love,
As I, O my love, love thee;
And his heart is great with the pulse of Fate,
At home, on land, on sea.

OBSERVED AT A GLANCE

Doubtless Senator La Follette is sincere in his desire to have Secretary Mellon fired, but the senator's pull isn't what it used to be.

Another puzzle is as to what the mail robbers do with all their money.

If Roy Gardner is not at the bottom of the mail robbing industry it is because he is at the bottom of Puget Sound.

Perhaps the American delegates to the conference know almost as much as the millions of voluntary counsel.

Strange how an innocent prisoner shrinks from the vindication that would result from trial.

The plea of insanity is so effective that an accused person making it may be assumed to be quite sane.

Senator Watson is the buzzing blue-bottle of the capitol.

The bulldog that bit a bandit deserved a meal of porterhouse to take the taste out of his mouth.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

WHERE A BIG MAN IS NEEDED.
(Chicago Tribune)

Lord D'Abernon, Great Britain's new ambassador to Germany, is reported to be attaining an influence in German affairs unprecedented in diplomacy. His position, supported by his government, and strengthened by his own exceptional abilities, is said to be almost that of an unofficial but effective chancellor, operating to reorganize the government.

Report of such a condition leads us to consideration of our own approaching appointment of an ambassador to Germany, which much be made as soon

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELLA M. STEWART

Most women and many men have entertained the club idea with enthusiasm. Clubs galore have been formed for the furtherance of every cause under the sun. Just when the meaning of the word was enlarged to signify an association of persons who meet to promote a common object philology fails to tell us. Webster declares that its original meaning was: "A stick or piece of wood, with one end heavier and thicker than the other, and not larger than can be wielded with the hand."

Now political clubs have, as must be admitted by any intelligent person, been prime favorites with men for many decades. They remained for the vote of woman to add variety to the idea of a political club.

In a certain large city during a primary contest for nominations for the mayorality not long ago, one of our foreign born citizens exercised the sovereign right of the ballot. Having done his duty as he saw it, he determined that his wife, who seemed not to appreciate the struggles of her sister suffragists to extend the ballot to her as well, should go to the polling place and perform her duty also. The wife not showing proper interest, the husband put the machinery of his particular political club into motion.

That the wife, alive to the privileges of American citizenship to some degree, should at once hale him into court, was due to the ignorance of her husband as to any other than the original meaning of the word "club," until it was impressed upon him by the judge through the medium of sentence.

It was prophesied that the entrance of woman into politics would inject new methods. The action of our foreign born citizen would go to show the correctness of the assertion.

Why not include a course in philology in our Americanization classes?

As the new treaty is ratified. We have no need or desire to take over any part in the government of Germany or any unusual influence in it, but our relations will be such that the strongest and most veritable diplomatist in America available for the task ought to be selected.

Not only the carrying out of the treaty but the advantageous development of our commercial relations with reviving Germany demand it.

Fortunately the post holds no allure for the socially ambitious. The appointment can be made free from political influence. A big man should be sought.

Comment on the News

By HENRY JAMES

An item in the news columns relates to an action brought by General Wrangel for violation of contract by dealers in clothing.

HENRY JAMES

Such a transaction is of more importance than may seem on the face of it. Crookedness in business indicates a moral status that calls for reform, but affords poor basis for any hope of reform.

In this instance contractors alien to Russia, evidently sought to cheat the Russians, thinking that they could pocket a fat profit, and that nothing would be said about it.

In the United States there were crooked war contracts in abundance. Vast as was the loss to the government, it was less vital than the loss of faith in human nature. When individuals doing business on a large scale plot to bilk the government that protects them and to which they profess allegiance, the outlook becomes dubious. A nation freely beshrinked with rogues is not sound.

Knowledge that there were such contracts here hurts the reputation of the United States. It is small comfort to be able to say that other nations, too, had their brigands and profiteers.

For a government to profess high intent towards its neighbors at the same time that its own citizens are engaged in cheating the neighbors, is waste of energy.

"Actions speak louder than words." Particularly if the actions be dastardly, and the words insurance.

Senator Lenroot says that if the charges made by Senator Watson are true they call for hanging of somebody. The charges are that American officers overseas had a habit of hanging or shooting private soldiers without trial, using which ever method seemed to be more convenient and amusing.

"That Lenroot is right there could be no denial. However, if the charges are false, as everybody believes them to be, they still call for something; and whatever it is that is called for should happen to Watson.

Many Russians are said to be friendly towards the United States. This is partly due to the presence there of men and women who had years of training in this country, who perhaps while here, did not appreciate American institutions. Now they have acquired a perspective and a more informative view.

Americans always have felt friendly towards Russia. This is the reason they deplore the fact that it has fallen under the blight of bolshevism. This accounts for their readiness to send food to the Russians.

Probably Russia will yet be a mighty, and respected member of the family of nations. But first, the people will have to cast off the Lenin yoke.

It seems that the assassin of Premier Hara was an excitable half-wit. He was unable to give any logical reason for his act. Such is likely to be the case with men who slay rulers doing good service. John Wilkes Booth, Charles Jules Giteau, Louis Czolgosz, murderers of American presidents, were fools or madmen, all.

Hara seems to have been an asset, that the world, considering its relations with Japan, ill could afford to lose.

Burch has been declared sane. It is improbable that anybody ever thought him otherwise. When a man adroitly plans a crime and a method of escape, and then proclaims his insanity, nobody believes him. But such are the methods of court procedure that the whole tribunal, including the jury, sometimes, is forced to make a pretense of belief. This is one of the jokes the criminal lawyer plays on justice.

The late Dan Hanna had been divorced four times, and even now seems unlikely to be allowed to rest. Ex-wife No. 4 desires his body to be dug up to determine the reason for his death.

To the general public the demise of a man who had been four times ground through the divorce mill, and had attended to extensive business in addition, could not be a surprise.

Do You Know That—

The ancient Romans practiced the artificial dwarfing of children, who were kept in a casting or frame to stunt their growth.

The highest atmospheric pressure to which divers and workers in caissons are subjected is about 43 atmospheres.

is particularly adaptable to smaller homes and apartments whose hostesses have steadily refused to make any sacrifice in quality, for lack of space. As seen in the illustration, its proportions are perfect and it comes in two shades of mahogany and fumed oak. And even at this popular price—it is equipped with the "Ultona" and the "Tone Amplifier," exclusive features, which have made the Brunswick the most sought-after and highly appreciated phonograph in the world today.

There are many reasons why you should select your Brunswick at this exclusive Music House—the tremendous demand for this New Model Brunswick is another reason why you should select yours while the stock is complete.

GUTHRIE TRIED TO GET IN BIG FIGHT

CHARLES B. GUTHRIE

Charles B. Guthrie, one of the leading real estate men of Glendale, was refused permission to enlist in the army during the early days of the World War because of his age. When the age limit was raised to 45 years, he enlisted in the Officers' Training Corps and was sent to Camp McArthur at Waco, Tex. At Camp McArthur he was assigned to Company N of the C. R. O. T. C. and served there until the armistice was signed, a period of a little more than a month.

Mr. Guthrie said that on the day the armistice was signed there was very little excitement in Camp McArthur, as a rumor to the effect that an armistice was signed a few days before had proven false and the soldiers there were skeptical. On Armistice night, the people of the town made the night hideous with their yells and soldiers in the camp were long and loud in their protest against having their sleep broken by the noise.

When the men in the camp had their first real illustration that the war was really over, was November 12. Several soldiers, Mr. Guthrie among them, were standing on the steps of the quartermaster's depot when an officer passed. The soldiers came to attention and saluted. The officer said: "Never mind the salute, boys; the war is over and you are all going home in a very few days!"

Mr. Guthrie's company was one of the first to be demobilized, and he returned to Glendale to resume his work as a real estate operator. The fact that Mr. Guthrie returned to this city and again took up his work of selling real estate, is ample proof that he believed in the future of Glendale and was willing to cast his lot with the other boosters of the city.

Mr. Guthrie said, recently: "There is no doubt that Glendale is the fastest growing city in Southern California and anyone owning property here will profit by its growth. The demand for Glendale lots is increasing daily. Lot buyers are coming in in great numbers. The eagerness of lot buyers to get in this section shows what may be expected. Glendale will continue to grow in the future as in the past and will, before many years, be one of the greatest home cities in the Southland."

HOW DID YOU FEEL ON ARMISTICE DAY THREE YEARS AGO

Glendale on November 11, 1918? What did we do then? As our thoughts traverse the long road that has been made since that eventful day memory comes creeping back to put her hand in ours and remind us of the travail of that period, the things that we thought and did.

We were just past the crest of the first influenza epidemic. Schools and churches had been closed for weeks, but there was a promise, later fulfilled, that the churches would open for worship the following Sunday.

The drive for united war work—the Salvation Army, Knights of Columbus, Jewish Relief, Y. M. C. A.—was on, with F. H. Vesper as its chairman, and Mrs. Charles H. Toll, working first lieutenant. Women teachers in the schools had been pressed into service in the campaign to raise Glendale's quota of $100,000. Campaign headquarters presented a busy scene with Mrs. Toll, Ezra Parker, Eva Daniels, Clara Midcalf, Carrie Noble, Mrs. M. O. Ryan, Mrs. John W. Cotton, Elizabeth Jackson, Lorraine Mitchell, Elsie Church and Vera Sinclair much in evidence.

It was not the day of mad revelry that turned the heads of the people November 8 when the premature announcement of an armistice was made and the people were too glad to believe to challenge its authenticity. November 11 was a day of sober, chastened joy, not less happy but a better organized and more orderly celebration.

In obedience to a proclamation issued by City Manager T. W. Watson, autos fittingly decorated with flags, banners, mottoes, and flowers assembled at three points at 4 p. m. for a parade, viz: Broadway and Glendale, Brand and Broadway, San Fernando and Central, with captains at each place to direct the line of march. Every machine of the 345 in line was packed with merry makers tooting horns, ringing bells or registering joy in other ways, and every sort of noise-making hardware that could be attached to the axels as trailers had been called into requisition, including old cans and frying pans which struck sparks from the pavement in a comical trail as dusk descended.

Thoughtful impromptu the parade did not lack for spectacular features.

MANY PEOPLE HERE ATTEND PEACE MEET

Glendale was well represented at the Association for World Peace, organized Wednesday at the City Club in Los Angeles. Representatives of 24 political, educational, religious, industrial, civic and social organizations were present and addresses were made by representative men. J. H. Braly, well-known resident of this city being among the number. Messages of approval were read from Senator Hiram Johnson, Congressman Osborne, Secretary of Labor Davis and other government officials. R. W. Hadden, founder of the organization, in a stirring address declared that after the demonstration we have had of the money people are willing to spend for the support of war, we cannot decently refuse to dig down in our pockets and refuse to spend a few dollars for the purpose of bringing peace and happiness to a war-sick world.

G. B. Oxnham, pastor of the Church of All Nations, who was the chief speaker at the School of Religious Education inaugurated at the First Methodist church of this city Wednesday night, was one of the speakers at the peace meeting and brought to it the endorsement of all the churches of Los Angeles.

A decision was reached to make Washington the national headquarters of the association and to establish branch associations throughout the country. An executive board of eleven members was elected, which included four residents of Glendale, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Braly, Arthur Cotter and Mrs. Charles H. Toll.

A second meeting was held Thursday afternoon to adopt a constitution. There were several coffins for the Hohenzollern dynasty, one being labeled "Kaiser Bill, His Last Ride." The hook and ladder truck of the fire company carried a scared little she-goat placarded: "They got his Nanny."

Trustee Hartley Shaw's auto bore the legend, "Good Night, Bill." On another auto was the placard: "Closed season for killing women and children."

A Home of Your Own Is the Surest Guarantee of Continued Happiness

At this moment you may be enjoying the full strength of your manhood, your earning power may be high, and it may seem well enough to pay rent. But how about the years to come, when age creeps on you, when your earning power is diminished? Will you be able to settle down to a period of contentment in your own home or will you be forced to struggle on and pay rent in some undesirable neighborhood?

On your far-sighted plans today depends the answer. Forethought and wisdom should impel you to invest in Real Estate—the safest, solidest provision against the future.

The constant rise in Real Estate values assures you ample dividends on your investment. And besides, you will enjoy inestimable dividends in health and contentment—dividends that can never be measured by dollars. Talk it over with your wife. Then we will be glad to have you avail yourself of our service and experience.

BUY THAT LOT

Secure that lot before it is too late. A year ago there were any number of desirable close-in residence lots. Today they are few and far between. The prices of these good lots have increased during the past year from 25 per cent to 50 per cent. So buy that lot NOW. These lots can never be cheaper than they are today.

Buy that property in Glendale NOW. To delay until tomorrow may mean a loss of $1000 or more. Here's the reason. The eyes of the entire country are turned longingly toward Glendale. This is a city of good climate, good people, good schools, good public utilities, good realty values, good homes and good will. The outside world is beginning to realize the fact and for this reason realty values are sure to advance.

Glendale real estate is one of the safest investments in the world, for this city is sure to go ahead. During the past two years the population of Glendale has almost doubled. Realty prices, in many instances, have trebled. She cannot and WILL NOT stop now. It is too late to take a backward step. Will realty values double in the next two years? Every indication shouts aloud "YES."

BUY THAT HOUSE

Buy that home today. Homes in Glendale are bringing better prices now than a year or two ago, everything points toward a substantial increase during the next few months. A home priced at $5000 today may be marked $6000 tomorrow. You'll never be able to buy cheaper, so why run the risk of an advance? That's sound business logic.

UNKNOWN HERO WORLD WAR TO BE BURIED WITH IMPRESSIVE RITES

Most Notable Gathering of Its Kind in World's History To Be Held in Nation's Capital at Noon, Honoring the Golden Stars of American Army; Statesmen and Soldiers of World Powers Pay Tribute

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—A nameless martyr will join his comrades today in the ranks of Arlington's pale battalion of the dead, while the mighty of many nations stand with uncovered heads at his grave.

They will dress his coffin in the flag he served; they will bare him aloft through the streets of the city; they will place medals upon his casket; they will kneel at his tomb.

Never so grand and never so simple a ceremony has marked the burial of a man until this third Armistice Day—when the President of the United States, two former Presidents, the Premier of a kingdom, the Premier of a sister republic, generals of great armies, admirals of titan fleets, and a host of the world's most brilliant men and women march to Arlington and stand in the Memorial Amphitheater to give tribute to the unknown hero dead.

This morning a regiment stood at salute as the caisson bearing the nameless one was lifted from the catafalque in the rotunda of the Capitol and borne down the steps of the east portico in the hands of medal men.

This afternoon the western wall of the Blue Ridge Mountain will echo back the thunder of Fort Myer's batteries that will fire the national salute at the close of the ceremonies.

From early morning till the first salvo has been fired after the interment at Arlington minute guns will be fired from Fort Myer, ceasing only for the two minutes of silence at noon.

This evening the assemblage of dignitaries will have returned to the city that stretches out just across the Potomac, and the unknown soldier will keep his lonely watch in a marble trench in Arlington—Gotha of the Brave.

Thousands of visitors viewed the remains in the rotunda of the Capitol. No one was denied admission. There will be titled men from other shores and famous men from home; there will be doughboys and doughboys' mothers, there will be girls and little children, there will be men of all estates. Hundreds will bring floral pieces.

Bodyguard on Watch
Around the catafalque, the same whereon there lay in state the bodies of our martyred Presidents—Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley—will stand a bodyguard of four—a soldier, a sailor, a Marine and a member of the National Guard. At 8 o'clock the pallbearers will assemble in the rotunda, while the corridors of the Capitol will be strung with the members of the escort. At 8:30 o'clock the remains will be borne by the bodybearers down the steps of the Capitol to the waiting caisson. The pallbearers will follow in a column of two. The Navy Band will play sacred music during the solemn procession to the gun-carriage. The guard of honor and the escort will stand at salute.

A muffled drum will sound and the band will play the opening notes of a funeral march, and, slowly at first, then at a quicker step, the cortege will move away from the Capitol, down the Hill, into Pennsylvania avenue, past the Peace Monument and on toward the granite shaft of the Washington Monument that rises above Potomac Park.

Pershing Heads Procession
General John J. Pershing, Commander of the Armies and Chief of Staff, will ride his jet-black horse at the head of the procession. Immediately behind him will be his Aides and Staff and a line of distinguished Generals and Admirals, including Marshal Foch, Generalissimo of the Allied Armies; First Admiral of the British Fleet Lord Beatty, and General Diaz, Commander-in-Chief of the Italian Armies.

At the head of the escort, next in line, will be Brigadier-General Harry H. Bandholtz, Commanding General of the District of Washington, with his Staff. The escort will be composed of a composite regiment of foot troops made up of a battalion of regular infantry from Fort Washington, a battalion of sailors and marines from Quantico, Va., and the Washington Navy Yard; a battalion of National Guard Infantry, a Myer, Va., and a squadron of cavalry, also from Fort Myer. Closing the ranks of the escort will be the clergy, headed by Bishop Charles H. Brent, major chaplain U. S. A. and Bishop of the Episcopal church in Washington.

The caisson will move between the lines of the guard of honor, the pallbearers and the bodybearers.

President on Foot
Warren G. Harding, President of the United States, will walk behind the remains, accompanied by a military aide. Vice-President Calvin Coolidge, Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court William Howard Taft and the Associate Justices; the members of the Cabinet; Senator Cummins, President pro tempore of the Senate; the United States Senators, eight abreast; Speaker of the House Gillette; the members of the House and the Medal of Honor Men following.

Members of the American Legion, the Grand Army of the Republic, the Red Cross and numerous other societies will march in the wake of the American officials.

Next in the great funeral pageant will come the governors of the states; the Allied and Associated Ambassadors and Ministers, other Ambassadors and Ministers, the United States and foreign delegates to the Limitation of Armaments Conference, distinguished foreign officers, including the Allied and Associated Military and Naval Attaches; the Assistant Secretaries of Executive Departments, the Chiefs of the Bureaus and Branches of the War and Navy Departments and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Motors Part of Way
When the procession reaches West Executive avenue, at the northwest corner of the White House grounds, the President, the Vice-President, the Supreme Court, the Cabinet, the Senate and House delegations will leave the columns as the line halts for five minutes. The President, Mrs. Harding, military and naval aides and the Vice-President and Mrs. Coolidge will proceed by motor to the Arlington Memorial by way of the Highway Bridge and the Treasury and McClellan Gates.

The procession will move forward to the Aqueduct Bridge, where it will be joined by the Marine Band on the Virginia side. The cortege will move slowly up the Virginia foothills by the road that leads to Arlington. At the gate of the cemetery the cavalry, field artillery and machine-gun company will leave the line and parade on the drill ground facing the cemetery.

The escort will draw up at the western entrance of the cemetery and stand at salute while the caisson passes through Arlington Gate. The caisson will be removed from the caisson by the bodybearers and borne around the colonnade to its place in the apse, the pallbearers following in double file. The band will be massed in the right colonnade and render sacred selections as the body is carried to its appointed spot in the amphitheater.

5,200 Seats Filled
Every seat of the five thousand two hundred in the Memorial Amphitheater having been assigned previously, the guests at the great ceremony will take their places in orderly fashion. The President and Mrs. Harding will be escorted to the apse, while other members of the President's party will be escorted to their seats in the amphitheater.

A great silence will come over the assembly for a moment, and then Major-General James G. Harbord, master of ceremonies, will signal the Marine Band, and the impressive program will begin with sacred music. At the conclusion of the rendition Bishop Brent will deliver the invocation, which will be heard by the audience with bowed head.

A two-minute silence will keep the audience standing. The silence will be broken by the silver-voiced leader, who will begin "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and the assemblage will join in the hymn.

Following the President's address and the hymn by the band, the impressive ceremony of bestowing the medals on the unknown dead will take place.

President Bestows Medals
President Harding will advance to the catafalque and place upon the coffin the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross.

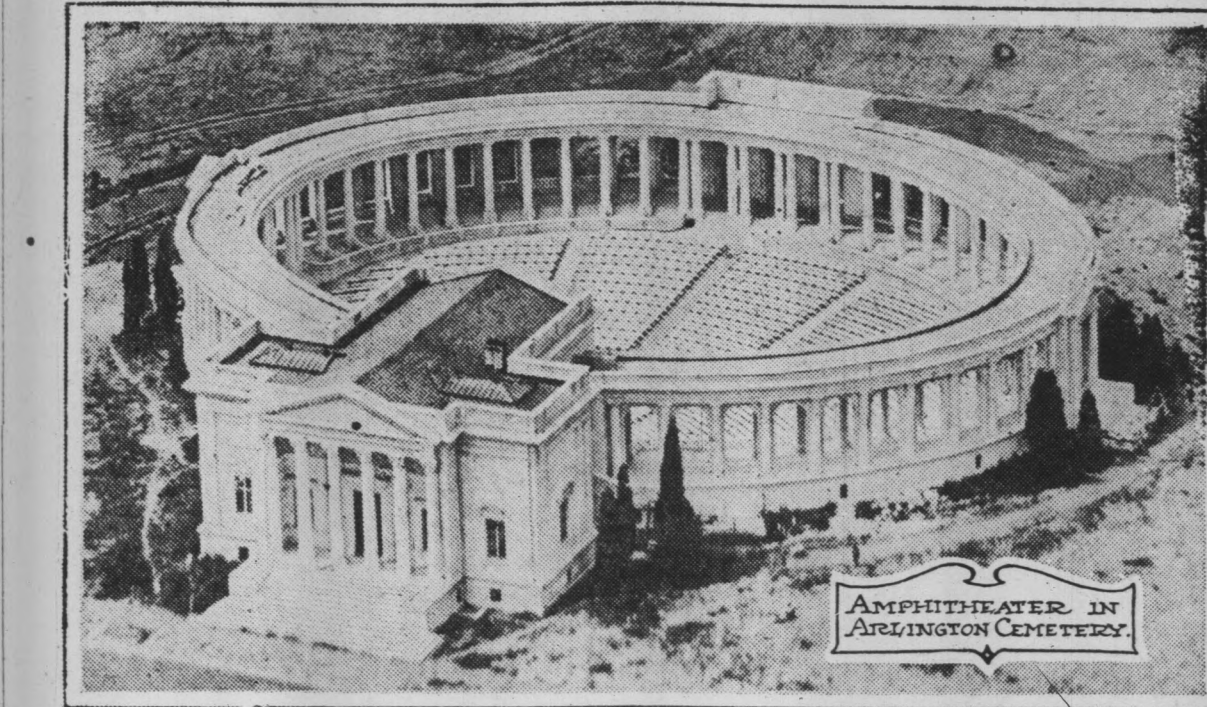

The representative of Premier Lloyd George will advance and place upon the bier the Victoria Cross—a markedly impressive moment, for it will be the first time in history that the Victoria Cross has been bestowed upon any other than a subject of the King of England.

Marshal Foch will salute the dead and place on the casket the Croix de Guerre. The unknown soldier had previously been decorated with the Medaille Militaire and the Legion of Honor emblem before the body was shipped from France.

General Diaz will salute the unknown and rest on the coffin the Italian Medal for Valor.

A lieutenant-general, Baron Jacques of the Belgian Army will place upon the casket the Belgian Croix de Guerre. Sacred music will again fill the amphitheater. Another hymn will be sung. The chaplain, Bishop Brent, will recite the twenty-third Psalm. Another anthem will follow the reading of a Scripture Lesson, Revelations, vii, 9-17, and the ceremonies will close with a hymn.

Final Resting Place
The caisson will be lifted by the bodybearers and carried to the place prepared for it in the base of the sarcophagus, not far from the spot where rests the body of Admiral Dewey. The last procession will be made through an armed guard. The line will draw

CHESTER JONES WAS ON FIRING LINE AS ARMISTICE CAME

Local Policeman In Battle
Before Metz as "Bell Rings" Down War

Possibly one of the most interesting experiences related in Glendale in regards to the signing of the armistice on November 11, 1918, is told by Chester Jones, a member of the Glendale police department who returned to the United States seven months ago from duty with the army of occupation on the Rhine. Jones was a member of company K, 34th infantry in the Seventh division and was on the front line near Metz when the armistice was signed.

Jones' regiment went over the top at 10 o'clock on the night of November 10 and advanced about three miles against the enemy in the face of stubborn resistance. Metz was one of the last remaining German strongholds, and they realized that when Metz was lost to them the territory in that section would be impossible to hold. At 2 a. m. the advancing Americans were halted and ordered to hold the line until the signing of the armistice.

From 2 o'clock in the morning there was general artillery fire all along the border until 10 a. m., when all available allied artillery was thrown into action and bombarded the enemy lines until 11 o'clock.

At 11 o'clock, on the minute, all firing ceased along the entire front. A German infantryman mounted the parapet of the enemy trenches and sounded the American "Recall" and turning toward the American trenches said in English, "Goodbye boys, I'm going back home to my wife and family."

On armistice night the doughboys along the front held a general celebration and used up all signal lights and artillery rockets in a wild display of fireworks. Before darkness settled down on armistice day, parties of soldiers made trips into "no-man's-land" to gather souvenirs and trophies of the last battle.

The 34th regiment remained in the lines at Metz until after Thanksgiving burying the dead and cleaning up the front. From their position before Metz they were moved to the Rhine and were relieved to return to the United States about eight months ago.

A REAL SNAKE STORY
PARIS, Nov. 10.—Francois Jannard living at Dijon, has but one hobby in life. It is that of killing vipers around his native town. A recent 15-days' bag totaled 550, and in ten years Jannard has accounted for more than 20,000 vipers. Vipers are only found in Central and Southern France, but are extremely dangerous in these regions.

FEW AUTOS IN GERMANY
BERLIN, Nov. 10.—One of 800 Germans owns an automobile. The approximate number of registered motorcars in Germany at present is 70,000, according to the Berliner Mittagzeitung.

Outside the amphitheater and will be followed by the honorary pallbearers, President Harding, his Cabinet, foreign diplomats and, in orderly fashion, all who had witnessed the ceremonies in the amphitheater.

After the casket has been placed at the entrance to the sarcophagus, the ceremonies for the dead will be conducted by the chaplains—first in the Episcopal faith, then in the Catholic faith and then in the Hebrew. The body will then be entombed.

Three salvos will ring out from the firing battery. The din of the salute to the dead will be hardly stilled when a bugler, standing close by the spot where the unknown is laid to rest, will sound "taps." From the heights above Arlington the batteries of Fort Myer will thunder the national salute of twenty-one guns.

The great ceremony over the mourners will melt away, leaving the unknown soldier to "the lone couch of his everlasting sleep."

Entering the war as a buck private, he came out a lieutenant-colonel. He won 11 citations for bravery and wears the Distinguished Service Cross. He served with the Ninth Infantry, of the Second Division, and participated in all the major offensives of that division, being wounded at St. Mihiel.

LONDON CELEBRATES ARMISTICE DAY PRIVATELY TODAY

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The third anniversary of Armistice Day was celebrated officially and privately throughout the country this morning and at 11 a. m. all movement ceased for two minutes, during which the nation stood silent in mourning for the dead. The only exception was in the case of the railways whose time schedule would have been dislocated by even two minutes delay, and water transport dependent upon the tides. Even here, trains and boats were halted where it could safely be done.

In the cities the hour of 11 was signalled by rockets or bells and all vehicles came to a halt, passengers rising and standing hatless with bowed heads. All the churches held special services, and the conclusion of the two minutes period of mourning was heralded by joy-bells.

The biggest celebration was held in London, where vast throngs made pilgrimages to the Cenotaph and Westminster Abbey. At the Cenotaph on Whitehall there was an imposing civil and military display.

Eleven o'clock was signalled by the discharge of the war-time air raid, rocket signals. The troops came to the salute, and the thousands of spectators massed in Whitehall stood bareheaded. In many places the unknown of the great city was broken by the sob of bereaved women.

At 11:02 a fresh salvo of rockets marked the end of the period of mourning and this was followed by the singing of the hymn "O God Our Help in Ages Past" accompanied by the massed bands. Upon its conclusion the massed buglers sounded the "Reveille," and the ceremony ended.

The public were then marshalled in long columns marching past the Cenotaph to Westminster, enabling those desiring to do so, to place wreaths on the memorial. There were many thousands of beautiful floral tributes.

BE NO GREAT MAN IN LEADERSHIP ARMS. PARLEY HERE

America, Great Britain, Japan to Form Plans Before Parley Gets Busy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—With the arms limitation conference only a few hours away, a war-tired world looks toward America for guidance. Though the English, Japanese and other conferees have their own plans—and in some cases axes to grind—they have pocketed these, waiting upon America to lead the way. Until the United States has spoken at the horseshoe table in continental hall, these plans will remain pocketed.

Unlike the Versailles conference, which opened about three years ago, no outstanding leader now stands forth in the arms parley. No foreign statesman yet reaching the United States has received the tumultuous acclaim that greeted former President Wilson when he went to Paris to make peace.

Although other nations are waiting on the United States to make the lead, it is understood here that Great Britain and Japan have programs to announce as soon as America's program is revealed.

England for instance is willing to have a navy no larger than America's if the word of its first lord of the admiralty, Lord Lee of Fareham spoken last March, still holds good. Its plans will undoubtedly follow that line, for Lord Lee is here as a delegate. Though outwardly there is mainly "waiting" there is already some "chatting dish diplomacy" under way, according to delegation information.

In other words, within the privacy of non-official meetings, some of the slate for the coming meet is being written. America, Japan and England, are credited with being agreed on certain procedures which otherwise would merely consume time within the conference proper.

ENGLISH VETERANS SETTLE IN CANADA

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 10.—Former British army officers and their families will comprise a colony to be established on 30,000 acres of land in the Lillooet district of British Columbia, under a plan now before the Royal Colonial Institute of London.

At a recent conference in London, presided over by the agent-general for British Columbia, Colonel H. F. Meurling outlined the plan. The land, he stated, would be colonized and developed under the direction of a company. Half the capital stock would be taken up on a regular investment basis by shareholders. The remaining half would be issued to the British settlers.

These settler-shareholders would be employed by the company and paid monthly wages. They would be housed and otherwise provided with adequate living facilities. The proposal, London Dispatch says, was warmly approved by the Institute. Details are to be worked out by a committee comprising several members of Parliament. Sir Rider Haggard will be asked to act as chairman.

The movement is in line with various other steps taken by the Dominion and provincial Governments to aid settlers in getting a firm start on the rich lands of the West. New settlers of two or three years ago are prosperous farmers of today as a result of aid extended on choice of lands and development of mixed farming, stock raising and fruit growing.

Officials believe the plan to bring over the former British officers and their families will work out successfully.

RUSS PRINT SHOP IN BERLIN
BERLIN, Nov. 10.—The Russian government will start an official publishing firm and printing shop in Berlin, giving as a reason that it is unable to print enough books in Russia because of the shortage of indispensable machinery. It will also open a Russian arts exhibition this winter.

President Harding to March at Head of Long Column Paying Honor to America's Soldier Dead; Sacred Numbers by Marine Band, President's Oration Are Features of Most Solemn Ceremony Today

From the proud capitol, Washington, down to the humblest hamlet, Armistice day will be observed the nation over today.

While the nation observes the day, Washington will honor the unknown dead. His body will be escorted to Arlington cemetery with all the glory that befits the last sad rites of a hero. President Harding and other notables will be in the funeral procession. At Arlington, the unknown dead will rest within a vault of marble fit for a king, a vault adorned with myriads of flowers and decked with the honor medals of the nation with which his own was associated in the great war.

The ceremonies will start at 8:30 this morning (11:30 Glendale time), when the body of the unknown soldier, after lying in state in the rotunda of the capitol, will be carried out by eight heroes of the war and placed on a caisson. Headed by President Harding and members of his cabinet marching, the funeral procession will move down Pennsylvania avenue to the White House and to Arlington cemetery.

Medal of Honor Man to Take Part in Ceremonies

DENVER, Nov. 10.—With former President Woodrow Wilson and many other notables attending the ceremonies at the burial of an "unknown American soldier" in Arlington National Cemetery on November 11 will be James Sweeney, seventy-six years old, of Denver, a veteran of the strife of '61-65, probably the only man in the United States to possess two Congressional medals of honor.

Through Adjutant-General P. C. Harris, Sweeney has received an invitation from Secretary of War Weeks to be one of the nation's honor guests when the remains of the "unknown American soldier," brought to this country from a war grave in France, are laid at rest in the national cemetery at Arlington.

The first honor medal received by Sweeney was pinned upon him by former Secretary of War Stanton, in the presence of President Lincoln.

When the Grand Army of the Republic adopted badges similar in design to the original Congressional medal of honor Congress called in all medals and issued new ones, but because of the circumstances surrounding the presentation of his medal Sweeney refused to relinquish it and six years ago Congress granted him permission to retain the original medal and also authorized a medal of the new design for the Civil War hero.

Sweeney enlisted in Company A, First Vermont Volunteer Cavalry, in 1862. Although wounded twice he remained with the colors, and at Cedar Creek, October 19, 1864, he was detailed to General Sheridan's scout corps, under command of General George A. Custer, of Custer's massacre fame.

Donning a Confederate uniform Sweeney penetrated the Confederate lines alone at night on orders to shoot down mules in the supply trains. While waiting the approach of a wagon train from the top of a bluff he was surprised and captured as a spy by three Confederate officers. Sweeney, realizing he would be shot, determined upon desperate tactics. Turning suddenly upon his captors he held them up and marched them and their mules toward the Union lines.

It was not long before a comrade joined him, and the success of Sweeney's strategy was assured.

Not only were the officers captured, but Sweeney took along the colors of the Confederate army.

Hearing of the extraordinary exploit General Sheridan recommended that General Custer take Sweeney to Washington with him to receive the medal of honor. After Stanton pinned the medal on Sweeney's coat the Secretary of War turned to Custer and made him a major-general. General Custer was so surprised and overcame with emotion that he wept like a child.

Sweeney has lived in Denver for thirty-five years and has a large family.

SENATOR JOHNSON'S PLEA LET PEOPLE HAVE THEIR SAY

(Copyright 1921 by United Press.)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—"A disaster like that of Paris" will mark the arms conference here if "its doors are locked and secrecy prevails," Senator Hiram W. Johnson, California, declared today in a statement to the United Press, pointing out the urgency of full publicity regarding the parley.

"Publicity is the weapon of peoples, of which they are ever robbed by secrecy's plausible arguments," said Johnson. "Idealism was defeated, high hopes dashed, at Versailles and the vicious results were reached by secrecy. Substantially the same representatives responsible for the Versailles treaty meet now at Washington to limit armaments. They worked their will to the everlasting harm of the world at Versailles."

"Let people have their way at Washington for the world's eternal good. People can be trusted to disarm; diplomats will disarm only when compelled by overwhelming public opinion threatening their political existence. The country should demand, and demand in such a fashion that it dare not be denied, open sessions at the conference and the fullest publicity."

"Success of the limitation of armaments conference will mean less taxes, lightening the burden of peoples, a brighter and better world. Failure means doubt and uncertainty, crushing taxation, possible imperialism and militarism. Success will be the triumph of peoples; failure, cynical diplomacy's victory."

"If the doors of the conference are open and world opinion dominates it, success is assured. If the doors are locked and secrecy prevails, there will be another disappointing disaster, like that of Paris."

My Experience on the Front During Last Days of War

(The following narrative of war experiences is by Rev. Harley G. Preston, pastor of the Pacific Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Glendale, who, at the time of the war, resigned from his charge and went abroad. He is now Acting Chaplain of the Venture County Post of the American Legion, but will transfer his membership to Glendale. Ed.)

I was with the Sixth Division in France, called the "Sixth," having a reputation for being on hike perhaps more than any other division. Forty-one days in front lines, Alsace sector, and in reserve and support, in the Argonne Meuse drive, with orders to relieve a front line division by passage of lines, i. e., while in action, and no trenches, all open warfare.

We were close up to Sedan, with the Germans on our right and our left

and in front of us, and towns burning all about us. We were put to sleep (some of us) by the music of flying shells from both artilleries, with one dropping short now and then, and frequent bombs finding their way from the clouds to spots uncomfortably near us. We saw the last wave of the Forty-second Division going over the top, and much fun was to soon be ours when the dismay of our men, with two or three other divisions, were ordered back to another sector (Metz sector) as Sedan had been taken and we had too many men there.

Though I did not, with my Division, get into the thick of the fight, I had, nevertheless, some interesting experiences, such as being shelled and bombed without being hit, etc., which will not have space to relate in this brief article. I will just give a brief sketch from my diary of my observations, just before and up to the signing of the armistice.

Marched November 10th, 1918, with Third Battalion, Fifty-fourth Infantry, from 7.45 a. m. to 2.30 p. m., camping that night outside the town (what was left of it) of Oche, the then vilest smelling town in France, I believe. Dead bodies of men and animals must have been buried improperly. On our march that day passed hundreds of dead Germans, without so much as taking time to go over to where they were in the fields along our line of march. We marched with full packs for 45 minutes and rested 15 minutes, and do not remember of a single man who did not take his 15 minutes resting. And still some say the Americans were in the war for souvenirs.

We camped right near a big German cabbage patch, some of the finest cabbage I ever saw, and we had cabbage prepared in every conceivable manner an army cook can devise, all kept cream stew.

We set up a double pup tent and five of us crawled into it, and I was squeezed in between two lieutenants, and, being lengthy, my feet continually tickled the head of the battalion commander, and he was not sly in reminding me of it.

Some crazy German opened up with a machine gun from the church steeple and you folks know what a disastrous weapon the machine gun is and what a heavy toll it took of human lives in the great war. The commander fitted two men out with automatics and sent them to the church to take the culprit dead or alive, perhaps preferably dead if he didn't stop shooting. They never got him—if they did I never heard of it. Anyway I guess he ran out of ammunition.

On the memorable day of November 11th, 1918, we got up early, and were on our hike at 7.45 o'clock, and marched through fields, over marshes, single file, through barbed wire entanglements with men ahead to cut it for us around shell holes, over trenches, through mud, on narrow roads, around ammunition trains, shipping, sliding, trudging along, through the sunless, wet November weather of that part of "Sunny France." We had been informed that the game might stop on this day, and that we would know by 11 a. m. By our watches we took notice that at 11 o'clock the constant drum fire we had heard ceased, with only an occasional shell exploding here and there, and we felt pretty sure the armistice was signed, and were confirmed a little later by the operator at a signal corps station, as we marched along. The boys immediately set up a cheer and yelled, "We're going home." But little did they think they would be held for months overseas while Uncle Sam, with Marshal Foch decided that the enemy would keep faith with the terms. Many of us felt that it would have been better to have gone on to Berlin and to have helped the Germans get things straightened out, much the same as was done on the Rhine, and there is little doubt but that Marshal Foch and the Allied generals had things coming their way, and it was reported that Marshal Foch, when he received the Armistice order from the Supreme War Council, sat down and wept because it was not pushed to unconditional surrender. We heard that the German soldiers were received on their return to Berlin with great pomp and glory, and that a bystander in Berlin would have thought they had won the war. None of us wanted to see the war prolonged, but in the name of civilization and democracy and of our buddies who had already fallen we some way felt like saying to Germany, "Now, Germans, you have made us a lot of trouble, and to make sure you won't do it again soon we are going to Berlin and help you run things for a while, and then if you are good we will turn it over to you with our best wishes; if you fight we shall have to fight and that would mean some of your property destroyed, but if you don't fight we shall not do so—but we are going to Berlin." Of course, there is another side to this. If that plan had been decided on and the Germans had fought, there would have been a loss of life, but it is not thought that it would have been heavy east of the Rhine. Then, too, that would have meant much German property destroyed, which would have interfered with the Germans paying the great indemnities levied upon them, and with no property destroyed, of course, there is not that excuse. After all, we were all glad it was over, as far as we were all personally concerned.

That night the front lines on both sides were lighted up as far as eye could reach with fireworks—all the flares and various signalling devices used in war of various colors were used in celebrating peace, and it put in the shade any Fourth of July celebrations I have ever seen, and I have seen the country's best. It lasted for hours, and was repeated again the next night.

The boys got to shooting their rifles into the air, and a ball from one of the cartridges lighted on a medical captain's foot and the Colonel ordered the demonstration stopped and all men to their pup tents on nature's green, somewhat damp, from recent rains. And while the danger from death and wounds in battle were over, there were yet many men looking fondly toward the homecoming who were not to get there; there were loving arms in America outstretched, faces upturned to God in prayers for the safe return of "that boy of mine," who, through exposure and hardships incident to the life of a soldier, was taken sick and dropped out of the ranks, possibly taken to a hospital, and gave up the ghost, joining his many comrades in the Golden West of the glorious sacrifice for the liberty of the world. As we count the white crosses in France and register the sorrows and heartaches in the world incident to the great war, is it not true that though willing to defend our country whenever necessary, there will go up to the God of Nations on this Armistice Day, a prayer that the Nations of the earth will find a better way of settling their disputes than by clash of arms, and that they will clasp hands in the bond of international Brotherhood and then not forget the grip? So help them God.

FRANCE IS READY TO ANSWER CHARGE OF MILITARISM

Peaceful Intentions France Will be Outlined When Disarming Comes Up

Paris, Nov. 10.—When the question of territorial disarmament comes up for discussion at Washington Premier Briand will be ready to face critics of his policy and of his country's "militaristic" activities. He will show that France, despite the ever-dangerous menace which shadows her Eastern frontier and despite the unratification of Alliances which should have guaranteed her safety, today has an army even smaller than before the war.

Marshal Foch and General Buat are in Washington to corroborate the Premier's statement, for they, with the French General Staff, violently protested against any reduction of the French army until such time as it was felt sure that no danger could come from Germany and that the latter had completely disarmed and taken on a peace-like attitude.

As it is today the French General Staff and the Interallied War Council have reports which show that in Germany's "peace" army there is a large percentage of noncommissioned officers. Furthermore, secret reports show that Germany could easily mobilize an army of close on a million of men, thanks to "schools of preparatory militarism," in a little over a week.

France, meanwhile, has reduced her army to less than 500,000 officers and men. In May of this year the French army totaled 800,000, and further cuts are still contemplated by granting long leave to both officers and men. The forces on the Rhine have been reduced to a minimum, and the 1919 class, called up in May in view of the occupation of the Ruhr, which was then contemplated, was demobilized in August. France's armies in North Africa and in Asia Minor have likewise been reduced to a minimum.

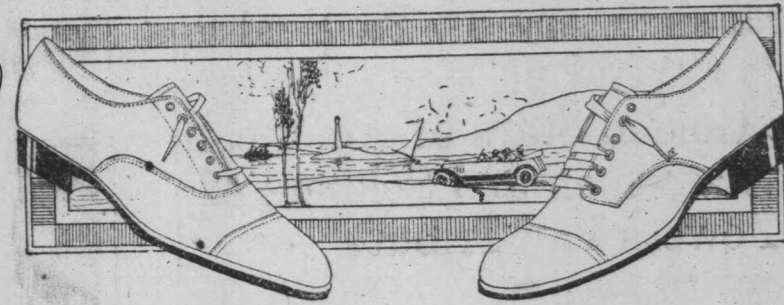

Not only are further cuts in the army's effectives foreseen, but important slashes are to be made in the country's army and navy budgets, not only with a view to economize the nation's money, but also to prove to the world that France has no "army penesces" when she states that a danger from Germany does really exist.

As regards France's naval forces it will be easy for Admiral de Bon, commander of the French fleet during the war, to show that no country need ever fear his country's naval power. Not only is the fleet at present one of the least powerful in the world, but construction of new ships has been completely abandoned for the time being, and the only serviceable ships France has, apart from one or two dreadnoughts and cruisers of the war, are German ships handed over according to the Versailles Treaty.

Washington Holds Most Distinguished Gathering

California Well Represented at Nation's Capital During Great Arms Parley Soon to Begin; Many Brilliant Functions to be Given This Season.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 10.—"Never before has it been given to a city of the New World to act as host to such a distinguished gathering of men as will assemble in Washington next month for the arms conference," said M. T. Haddon, of San Francisco, at the Willard hotel, when asked to express the western view as to the bearing of the arms parley on Washington influence.

"As the republic has grown in prestige through its international relations so has its Capital grown in the brilliancy of the diplomatic gatherings held here, and it is no exaggeration to say that the forthcoming conference will surpass anything of the kind ever held on this side of the Atlantic."

California is well represented in Washington this week. At the Willard alone the following were registered at one time:

Los Angeles: Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Kreider.

Oakland: Misses Esther and Sally Bobbins.

Pasadena: Mrs. J. H. Breyer.

Redlands: A. M. Pratt.

San Francisco: Mr. and Mrs. V. K. Butler; T. Richard Lee; Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Norcoros; Fred S. Samuels; Geo. W. Stamper; Wm. C. Van Fleet.

Washington is looking forward to an unusually brilliant social season as a result of the gathering of notables here.

Preparations are being made for elaborate events, and an extraordinary influx of social lights forecast.

On the eve of the disarmament conference official Washington is growing apprehensive of the misconception which the country seems to have with regard to the aims of the parley. As nearly as can be determined there is throughout the nation an expectation that disarmament as a preventive of future wars is what is contemplated, and that the conference will succeed in its aims only as a military and naval program is adopted which will guarantee the future peace of the world. Leaders of the movement fear that in the light of these rosy expectations the actual aims of the conference will look rather colorless if achieved. It is pointed out that even an extensive reduction of armament and a consequent lightening of taxation, the most that has been contemplated at any time, will prove disappointing to those who have visions of international merger wherein all swords are to be beaten into plowshares and the navies of the world are to be stowed in Davie Jones' locker.

The apprehension occasioned by this fact has increased rather than abated as the time of the conference has approached, with the majority of the people apparently demanding more of the parley than has ever been aimed at, and certainly more than can be delivered.

Repeated attempts have been made to warn the people against a misunderstanding of the parley aims. President Harding began to feel soon after the first proposal of a conference was made, that the country was preparing itself to expect too much. In numerous speeches and communications to the press he has tried to ward off any such misunderstanding. His efforts have been seconded by others connected with the movement. But in spite of these attempts to clarify the issue, officials here are going to the conference with the feeling that it is their business to achieve as far as possible one set of aims, whereas the country may be expecting another.

Some Sidelights of Great Arms Limitation Conference

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The Nation's Capital was busily engaged today putting the final touches to the setting for the opening of the great World Conference on Limitation of Armament and Far Eastern Question.

Washington is about to take its place definitely as a World Capital, with the gathering of foreign plenipotentiaries from the great powers for what will undoubtedly prove to be one of the most important international conclaves ever held.

Probably never before has this homey, all-American Capital of the United States had such an international air about its broad avenues. The rich, rolling tongues of French and Italian, the staccato conversations of Japanese, the high, sing-song voices of Chinese—all these strange "lingoes"—strange faces and strange customs make this city start, and turn around to look.

While many of the policies of the American Government undoubtedly will be far different, many things about the Washington Conference will be the same as the Paris Peace Conference. For instance, a great horseshoe table is being installed in the Daughters of the American Revolution Continental Hall for the open sessions of the Washington Conference. It is just like the horseshoe table in the famous Hall of Mirrors at Versailles, at which the Treaty of Versailles was signed.

A little "League of Nations of the Press" is assembled in Washington, with the hundred odd foreign correspondents mixing with the 200 or more American newspaper men—strange brown-skin and yellow-skin scribes from Asia, the Balkan style of European war correspondents, all affably learning from and teaching their American reporter colleagues.

The correspondents from Nippon were first on the ground, and early counts indicated they would be the strongest in force of the foreign reporters. Especially have they been impressed with the democratic and friendly greeting which this Government has extended to the foreign press. They were presented to President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes in the regular newspaper conferences with these government leaders. This is strange business to Japanese, where the Emperor is divinely exclusive.

The Diplomatic Corps, from Ambassadors down to attaches, are getting out their official dress clothing, with its yards and yards of gold braid and ribbon, preparatory to the functions which always go hand in hand with international gatherings of this kind, and where often some of the most important "business" is done. This task will be a simpler one for the American statesmen and diplomats, who have the same dress clothes as the doctor of Omaha or the business man of San Francisco.

Every army has its camp followers. Notable among these at the Washington battlefield is the band of propagandists. Most of these camp followers really preceded their armies. They are here busily singing praises of their wares, which are the aims and ambitions of their clients, and making all sorts of charges against established government and rival factions.

State Department officials for weeks have been frantically trying to corral enough automobiles and typewriters and other paraphernalia for the delegates and newspaper correspondents.

Secretary of State Hughes is expected to guide the Conference to a successful accomplishment of its purpose—the securing of an effective agreement among the Powers for limitation of armament. Hughes, the prime sponsor for the Conference, is going about his business with a vision in his mind, but with his feet firmly on the ground.

"Trained seals" are at the Washington Conference also. This "animal" is a high-priced newspaper correspondent, who interprets the news the honest, hard-working reporter writes.

Embassy buildings have been scrupulously spruced up for the fray, and the various nations have secured palatial Washington homes for their principal delegates and hotel suites for their lesser representatives and office forces.

Washington society matrons are expecting a busy season this winter, and are hopefully expecting that their aid will be called for in the social entertainment provided for distinguished visitors from overseas.

Meanwhile there has been almost an absence of news about the more important phases of the Conference. To repeated inquiries regarding the course of this Government's policies in the Conference, American officials reply, and wisely, "Do you hear of Great Britain, Japan, France or any of the other nations announcing their programs in the Conference?" And so the world watches and waits for the big event.

A beautiful "Arch of Jewels" has been erected by the American Government across one of the Potomac Park drives near where the Conference meets.

The open session of the Conference will be held in Continental Hall of the Daughters of the American Revolution building. The closed sessions and committee meetings will be in the beautiful Pan-American building, where it was originally intended to hold the open sessions of the Conference.

Officers for the delegates and conference rooms, with working quarters for the press, have been opened in the new Navy building. All of the buildings are about 200 feet apart and all situated in beautiful Potomac Park.

HANDCUFFS CLOGGED SPEECH
JACKSON, Mo., Nov. 10.—This corroborates the old idea that some folks can't talk without their hands. Ralph Brashear, held in connection with a robbery and murder here, refused to testify as long as he was handcuffed. Chief of Police Segraves had lost the keys. Court was adjourned. The keys were found that night. Brashear testified.

We Again Predict That in Value in the Next

Guthrie's Tenth Street Boulevard Tract is proving to be one of the "best sellers." Of the eighty lots in this tract, which was first offered to the realty buying public about a week ago, many have been sold. Mr. Real Estate Buyer, does this mean anything to you? Does it carry with it any significant fact? Does it by any chance reveal to you the fact that the center of building activity is gradually but surely swinging toward the northwest? During the past two years more building has been done in the close-in northwestern section of Glendale than all the other sections of the city combined. This proved the tendency of the lot-buying public. The desire now is for homesites farther out—out where there is more room, where there is greater freedom, closer to the big outdoors, farther from the strained, artificial life of the city, and where there is no danger of having an apartment house, flats or bungalow court built next door.

There are dozens of young couples in Southern California and many right here in Glendale who are undecided as to where to secure the site for that little home nest they have been enthusiastically planning. To these young folks we would say: "Investigate Tenth Street Boulevard Tract." Don't take our word for it—investigate. Go out to the tract, note the beautiful property, see how wonderfully the land lies, how the lots are arranged. Look down over the valley, and at the beautiful mountains to the north—what a wonderful view.

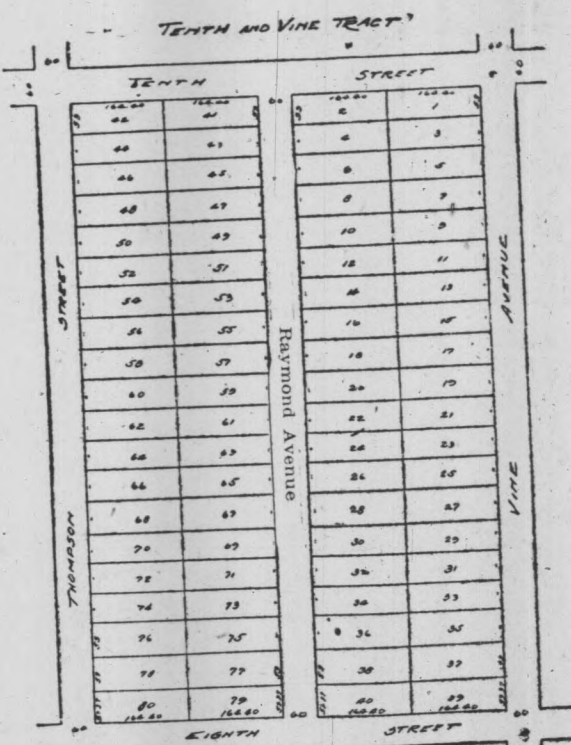

Select the lot you would like to own, plan to arrange your little home on a certain spot, with the garage over to the side, a lawn across the front and along the side and a part of the rear. Picture the vegetable garden close by, with possibly a little strawberry patch, a hedge of flowers up this side and a line of blackberries along the other. Then picture a little yard of chickens bringing up the rear, an orange tree here, a lemon or apricot tree there—now you have it, a sure-enough mental picture of the little home in the Tenth Street Boulevard Tract. Could two young hearts beating as one desire more? And just think, this can all be started for $100 down.

Of the general buying public, the young couples included, we would ask: Where can you find a section of land that is so sure to increase in value as is this particular tract? We stand by our prediction that these lots will double in value in the next eighteen months. Many of the close-in lots in Glendale are as high in price as they may reasonably be expected to be for a long time to come, but what about these slightly a-little-farther-out pieces of land? The truth is that the increaseremained in acreage form—awaiting the day when this property has advanced very little in price. It has remained in acreage form—awaiting the day when the Charles B. Guthrie company would subdivide it and offer it to the realty-buying public. With the opening of Charles B. Guthrie would subdivide it and offer it to the realty-buying public. With the opening of street put in, every yard of concrete laid, every home constructed, will have its little part in increasing the value of this particular tract. All of this will mean dollars in the pockets of those who are fortunate enough to get in on the ground floor, as they say.

The demand for Glendale lots is increasing daily. Lot buyers are coming in in great numbers. Many of these buyers are going just as far as the Tenth Street Boulevard Tract—and no farther. Each of these lot buyers has a vision—a vision of what this beautiful tract will look like in a few months from now. The streets will be lined with homes, with shade and ornamental trees, flowers, lawns, shrubbery, and, best of all, there will be an atmosphere of freedom and restfulness, that in the congested city money cannot buy.

As to the question of safety of the investment these lots are beyond question. They are as safe as Glendale itself, and who will question the future of this glorious city. These lots are right in the path of building activity and in the roadway of progress. Prices cannot remain where they are—THEY MUST ADVANCE! The eagerness of lot buyers to get into this northwestern section shows what may be expected of this locality. This property will be in the center of residential building activity before another year has rolled around. Do you, Mr. Realty Buyer, realize what this means? Of course you do.

The foregoing has been written for two purposes. First, for the purpose of interesting the lot buyer in the Tenth Street Boulevard Tract. Second, to show the fellow who is trying to decide where to put his savings and add to it a little each month, how he can secure an investment where his money will double as rapidly as it is paid in. Whether it is the site for a love nest for two or a home for eight, no better investment in lots can be found in Glendale today than in this tract. The way to make money in lots is to keep a little ahead of the building activity in your buying—in other words, before the real advancement in value and price has started.

Subdivision Opportunities

Don't Wish For Homesites Than These

Then there are those wonderful orange trees, a whole lot of them, and they are among the finest in the valley. Each year these beautiful evergreen trees are loaded down with wonderful golden fruit—simply loaded down with it. This fact alone is enough to gladden the heart of the resident and the tourist alike. To pick this golden fruit direct from the tree which grows on their own homesite is the one real wish of many who have not yet owned a Southern California home.

What more could be desired? These lots are excellently located, are high and slightly, are in an exclusive locality, and are covered with wonderful orange trees. Could more be desired?

Another pleasing feature that will be of interest to some, is that these lots are being sold on easy terms. A comparatively small payment only is required down, and the remainder can be paid in regular monthly installments. That's fair, isn't it?

The Kenneth Road district is THE exclusive section of Glendale. Everyone knows that. It is the location of beautiful homes, wonderfully improved home places, each of which is a dream in itself. And best of all, the future of this section is assured. It is today the location of the more expensive class of home and so it will ever be.

Comprising Twenty Exclusive Homesites

Each is of generous size, 75x175;
plenty of room for an ideal homesite.

The most stringent restrictions will preserve this section as one of exclusive homes.

Nature was indeed generous in giving these lots an unusual setting. On the north the green Verdugo Hills form a most pleasing picture—on the south, southeast and southwest you overlook all Glendale—an ever-interesting panorama. Kenneth Road is lined with splendid homes, and is becoming one of the most valuable of California's residence sections.

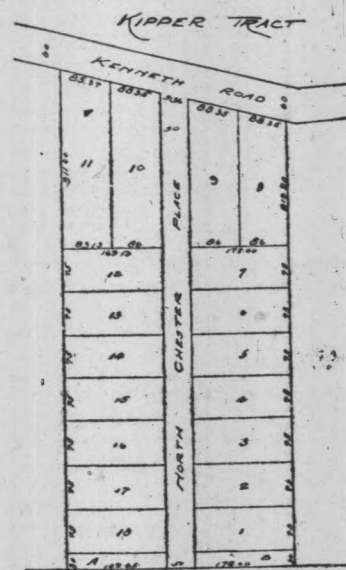

And on lots anywhere, it will be impossible to find more beautiful orange trees laden with fruit each year.

These 20 Wonderful Homesites Will Be Sold at Moderate Prices—Convenient Terms

Come to one of our offices early to secure first choice. The prices are unusually low considering their desirability. Only a small percentage of the total value is required down—and the balance can be paid on exceptionally easy terms. Allow us to show you these lots at any time.

War or Civilization on Earth, Which Shall People Choose?

By Rev. C. A. Cole, Pastor Central Christian Church, Glendale, Cal.)

REV. C. A. COLE

cease from the face of the earth! "Not learn war any more" when the most devastating and far reaching of all wars of history has just been concluded, and then preparations are going on feverishly for another!

"Yet to one who is familiar with history there is something else apparent. Victor Hugo said, 'Nothing on earth is so powerful as an idea whose hour has come.' The nations of earth have faced the dilemma between war and civilization for many Christian centuries and, while failure of conferences and tribunals to hamper war's devastating scourge is apparent, they know that the time has come to abolish this terror from the face of the earth. We know that we can have war or civilization but not both, any more."

Harry Emerson Fosdick was right when he said that there are some things we are coming to understand about war which means its dethronement. The hour of the idea that we shall not learn war any more is about at hand.

First, we have learned that there is nothing glorious about war. Of old, from childhood we were taught to want to emulate Alexander and Caesar and Napoleon. Soldiers have been pampered a hundredfold more than they have deserved. It's amazing what damnable things in human life are so habitually dressed in alluring paraphernalia and gorgeous clothes and stirring song. The saloon held its sway among us for so long because of this. Through all the centuries the glory of war has been held up. There's no excuse for us not knowing now. And when I say there's not any glory in it, any more, I am not unmindful nor disrespectful of those who have gone forth to maintain principle and to die for a great cause. But to take a royal spirited man, not afraid of anything, and teach him to drop bombs on helpless women and children or to twist a bayonet in the abdomen of an enemy is not glorious any more. That's why our boys don't talk since coming back from Europe.

No longer is the "disciplinary value" of war a virtue. War cannot be proven to be "a tonic for men's souls," any more. What prophets we were during the great struggle, telling how our boys would come back chastened and large men in ideals and character! We now know that the opposite has been the rule. Far lower levels of morals, and crime unprecedented, crimes of violence and sex, in America; the breakdown of all the relations of civilized life in Europe and a "collapse" in character unprecedented in Christendom since the Black Plague, are evidence that we were poor prophets. If we are wise we will never go again into hell expecting to come out redeemed spirits. With all the conditions, with one-tenth of the seriousness of which we are familiar, just where we can get any moral progress out of war, I am unable to comprehend. There is no virtue in it.

In spite of Hague tribunals and conferences to restrain and abolish its barbarities, to limit its area, and trim its claws, we have proven that there is no limit to which we will not go in the methods of killing in war. History ought to have showed us this. Reluctance to use weapons made in hell gave place to the deliberate attempt to beat all their inventors by our own nation before the war was over. The cost of war is beyond computation. The direct cost every day before its close was 50 per cent more than the entire cost of the eight years of the Revolutionary war. And 24.6 per cent of all our national expenditures for 1920, in America, was for war. I'll tell you the people of this world will not always endure this. They will rise up in their fury and blow this so-called civilization into bits, unless something is done and done at once to bring peace into a stricken world, where men shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning-hooks, shall replace war with pursuits of peace and learn war no more forever!

We cannot reconcile Christianity and war any more. We have reached the same pass our fathers did about slavery. We have come to the parting of the ways. I recognize the need of force in exigencies that come but opposition to building up war machines, and to laying the tinder for a great conflagration, is not pacifism—it is common sense and according to the teaching of Christ. Only a blind man can favor organized madness. It is time the church laid itself out in dead earnestness to change men's hearts or else this old world's tottering civilization is gone. Jesus Christ is the world's only hope. His principles alone will save it from destruction in the conflagration of war. The hour is at hand. America was born for this day. Let us pray that our leaders shall sense the issues and act like Christ's men.

WANTED HIS THREE SQUARES
BEAUMONT, Tex., Nov. 10.—J. J. Keir looked the city gift horse in the mouth. In other words, he demanded three meals a day at the city prison. "I got that many in the army, and I want that many here," he said. However, Jailor Munley breathed an old song to him, with a slight change. It was "You're Not in the Army Now." Keir is still receiving two meals a day.

DOG TURNS AUTO THIEF
CAMBRIDGE, O., Nov. 10.—A new form of auto theft has been reported here. Billy Whitcraft, age four, was playing with his toy auto on the sidewalk. A bulldog approached. Picking up the top in his teeth, the dog ran away with it. Billy reported his loss to Whitcraft, Sr., who failed to find dog or auto.

DISCOVER ANCIENT PALACE
LONDON, Nov. 10.—The remains of an old Roman road, portions of a big palace and beautiful mosaics have been discovered by chance at Alexandria by workmen engaged in digging the foundations of a new building. Experts declare the ruins to be of the Ptolemaic period (about 2,000 B. C.) and believe them to be probably the site of a royal palace.

BERLIN MOB NOW SUCCEEDED TO KAISER THRONE

Petty Politics Sways Fortunes of German People Since Kaiser is Out

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—The Berlin mob has to no small extent succeeded to the throne of deposed Kaiser Wilhelm. Petty Berlin politics sways the fortunes of the German nation. One thousand noisy demonstrators shouting their demands in the Lustgarten, before the old palace, or shrieking for their rights before the Berlin Rathaus, have more actual influence than a million quiet, earnest citizens in the provinces far from the mad chaos of metropolitan life.

The latest proof of power of the Berlin ward bosses is the refusal of the Social Democratic party leaders to accept positions in the Wirth Cabinet. Socialists representing every district in Germany voted at their national convention in Goerlitz to enter the coalition government with the liberal Volkspartei.

The leaders of the Socialist party, however, remembered that city elections are soon due in Berlin. The independent Socialists would use the entrance of the old Socialist party into the Wirth government for propaganda purposes; and they believed there would be danger of losing votes in the local elections. Whereupon the party leaders announced that for "tactical reasons" they could not carry out the wishes of the party convention, and would not enter the national cabinet.

System Not Representative
Germany's parliamentary system is not really representative of the people as the word representative is known in America. The Weimar constitutional convention adopted the British election system, whereby it isn't necessary for a man to be a resident of his election district.

The Socialist party leaders may decide that a resident of Berlin will be a candidate for election to the Reichstag from a Munich district. The nominee will make a trip to Munich, where he will make three or four speeches and return. If elected he probably will not see Munich again until the next elections.

The result of this system is that most of the members of the Reichstag, who are professional politicians, become dyed-in-the-wool residents of Berlin, swayed by vagaries of the Berlin mob, and coldly indifferent to the desires of the residents of the district they were elected to represent. In most cases they have never lived in the district, know almost no one there, and have no interest in it.

Imagine the Congress of the United States so elected that a resident of Michigan is the Congressman from California, and a Western ranchman a representative of Boston. This is the system by which the people of Germany are trying to rule themselves. But the situation in Germany is much more aggravated than it would be in America; for there is probably less sectional difference between north and south in America than between Bavaria and Prussia with their relations frequently at the breaking point.

The German Reichstag, although it is supposed to represent the entire country, has its ear to the ground to catch the rumbling wishes of the Berlin crowds. The politicians who drew up the constitution were fixing sure things for themselves; they can always stand for election in districts where assured of a positive victory. The people are becoming dissatisfied. The slogan has gone forth in Munich: "Los von Berlin!" There are many indications that the country will not rest until the Berlin petty politicians have followed the path of Wilhelm II.

J. HAM LEWIS NOT SMALL LAWYER

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—J. Hamilton Lewis, candidate for governor against Len Small at the last election, to-day denied reports that he would represent Governor Small at his trial on charges of embezzlement of state funds. At the same time Lewis appeared for a trial for Small, "free from prejudice or personal politics or political sentiment."

We do not forget the price they paid!

Today, we who were spared from the ravages of the World War are paying tribute to the brave young men who faced the enemy and died. We bow our heads today and silently ask the Great God of All to keep those brave heroes securely within his Fold and by His Gracious Light, to open the pathway where no more wars will be fought.

It Must Not Be

With the world bent under the terrific cost of war, not only in human lives, but with tremendous taxation as a result of the war, and contemplation of future wars, we are about to gather together in an attempt to free the world of warfare and continued taxation to pay for more war machinery. The men who gather in Washington tomorrow are leaders of the world, and to them is delegated the power to bring about the ends that will mean peace. There must be no more wars. That should be the abiding thought in the minds of all the great world leaders in Washington. May it so be. There must NOT BE MORE WARS.

Add your hopes, your prayers to the millions today who await the dawn of world peace.

Armistice Celebration Three Years Ago Vividly Recalled

By PAUL M. VISSMAN
(Member of the Glendale Daily Press editorial staff, who was in France three years ago today with the 364th Field Hospital company.)

"The G. A. F. telephones thus: 'On account of delay in delivery of ammunition operations foreseen for this morning, November 11, will be postponed until further notice. No action will take place, the morning of the 11th.'"

This order from the Commanding General of the Thirtieth French Army Corps was the first official notice that American troops in Belgium received, before daylight on the morning of November 11, 1918, of the cessation of hostilities. This order preceded the official notice of the signing of an armistice between Germany and the Allies ending a war that had taken toll of the finest of American and Allied manhood, had changed fertile fields to bloody shambles, broken the hearts of thousands, and left Germany, a once powerful nation, a ruined, broken country, wrecked by the lust of power, the ruling passion of a demented monarch.

The first unofficial notice received by the Ninety-first Division, in which many Glendale men served, came the previous night in the town of Waerghem, Belgium, when an officer of the French army mounted the platform in a field motion picture show and announced that an Armistice would be signed before daylight and that hostilities would cease on the morrow. When this unofficial announcement was made, the soldiers of the French and Belgian armies received it with frenzied shouts. Soldiers embraced and hundreds of brave poilus and Belgians, tired and heartsick with four years of fighting in which they had seen their homes destroyed and their families outraged and killed, wept like children.

The American soldiers in the audience received the news with skepticism, mindful of a previous report of the signing of an Armistice, after the first drive through the Argonne. This report had been received with wild joy by these Americans, who were anxious to complete the business of war and return to their homes, and they remembered that their hopes of an early return to America had been dashed to earth, in the midst of their joy, by the announcement that the Armistice had not been signed, and they were to resume hostilities within a few days. These men were stolid in the face of the wild joy that was overwhelming the French and Belgians. They were under orders to advance before daylight in the morning to again take up their position in the front lines and to attack at daylight.

The same announcement of the cessation of hostilities was unofficially made in every town along the front, and was received with same maniacal glee. Civilians and soldiers joined in the celebration. Lights blazed from the doors and windows of houses that for the past four years had been dark as tombs at night. Smiles spread over faces that for four years had known only sorrow. Very lights and signal guns were fired in the air while the soldiers made the night hideous with the din of revolver and rifle fire. Neighbors embraced and the night reverberated with the shouts of "Vive La France," "Vive Le Belge" and "Vive L'Amerique." Bewildered French soldiers, veterans of four years of grim war and red death, embraced beardless boys from America, veterans of two and, in some cases, three offensives.

Houses were thrown open, wine and coffee were pressed upon the passerby, whether he be soldier or civilian, Belgian, French or American, while all the time the shout of "Fin Le Guerre" echoed and re-echoed about the city. The indomitable spirit of the French came to the surface and the native love of pleasure, that had been buried for four years, burst its bonds and the French and Belgians entered the spirit of the night and celebrated with the same enthusiasm that had carried them through four years of hell, over the war devastated field of France, and through the depopulated and demolished cities of Belgium.

The French and Belgian enthusiasm overcame the skepticism of the Americans, and before the night was over they too had joined the joyous throngs, celebrating on the strength of a rumor that an Armistice would be signed on the morrow. The Americans joined in the celebration but, for the most part, they were celebrating with the feeling that if the report were really true it was wonderful, but if it, like the previous report, proved false they would have the knowledge of having taken part in one of the wildest jollifications ever held in the Old World.

The Americans celebrated—but they were under orders to move in the morning, to resume their positions in the front lines, and at the zero hour to attack. This thought—returned time and time again to the revelers and before midnight practically all of the Americans had left the mad throng of celebrants and sought their bunks to sleep as much as possible before resuming their march for the front in the morning.

Hours before dawn the American troops were routed and ordered to continue their march to the front. As they rolled their packs in the cold dampness that precedes the dawn in Belgium, wondering if they would be lucky enough to have coffee before starting their long march, many a lad who had taken part in the jollification the night before murmured to his buddy, "Armistice Hell! This looks like an Armistice has been signed, don't it. It was another rumor, and we fell for it like a bunch of boobs," and then he would grin and say, "But it was great while it lasted, wasn't it, Buddy?" and buddy answered, "You tell 'em. Let's go. They are issuing hot coffee at the rolling kitchen."

The columns formed and the American troops were on their way to the front to drive against the enemy, they thought, with the coming of dawn. Dawn came and with it the order from the Commanding General of the Thirtieth French Army Corps. Later in the morning, late for troops in the field, but about the time a laboring man in America rises to start his day of toil, orders came for the division to continue the march. About 10 o'clock in the morning the troops reached Audenard and were halted. An officer passed down the line and said that an Armistice had been signed to become effective at 11 o'clock that morning, and tired soldiers, too tired to heed the word of their officers that hostilities would officially cease that morning, lay down in trucks, by the side of the road, or sat in doorsteps, and slept. At 11 o'clock the official notice of the signing of the Armistice was read to the Ninety-first Division, and the soldiers of that division, the cream of western manhood, answered with their famous battle cry, "Powder River! Lt'er buck!"

November 11 was another day of wild joy. French and Belgians paraded the streets shouting "Fin Le Guerre," and embracing everyone they met. This time the Americans joined the celebration with an enthusiasm that left the French and Belgians breathless. Sammy knew the war was over, he had heard the official orders read, and he told the world he was glad.

Sammy was glad, but at the height of his happiness he stopped and a look of sorrow clouded his face. He had thought of his buddy that he left lying dead on a shell-torn hill in France, or lying mortally wounded, weltering in his own blood, among the poppy fields of Belgium. His buddy that he had gone through training camp with, his buddy that had shared blankets and rations with him, his buddy who, during the long nights, as they lay side by side on the wet ground waiting for the order to "hop off" on a new attack, had told him of his home and home folks and of the "one girl." His buddy had made the supreme sacrifice and "gone west" with the others who had considered their lives as nothing when compared with the ideals for which America had entered the war. The joy of the day was ended for Sammy and he quit the streets, left the merry-makers in memory of his pal who had made the great sacrifice making it possible for the Armistice to be signed.

The Yanks celebrated and, in the words of the doughboy, they "took the own apart. There were mademoiselles to smile on them, there was wine to be tasted, there was food to be eaten, the war was over, and why should they not be happy? They were going home. Officers had difficulty in finding men for guard details and other necessary camp duties, and mess sergeants were almost forced to use guns to keep the kitchen police on the job and away from the merry-making crowds.

When the first edge of the great happiness that swept over the American troops in France and Belgium had worn off, talk of going home filled every billet. It flourished in the estimette, or to again revert to the language of the American doughboy, "the gin mill." K. P.'s talked it while peeling spuds, and members of the hospital corps talked it as they swabbed throats with iodine and doled out pills.

Plans for renewing civilian life after demobilization were discussed on every hand and ruled the thought of every soldier, for the general opinion was that American troops from the west would be sent home and demobilized by Christmas, but this opinion was shattered by several months of police, guard and sanitary duty for the Ninety-first Division, and it was late Spring before they were sent home to relatives that were as impatient at the delay in demobilization as were the soldiers themselves.

This was Armistice Day three years ago today for members of the Ninety-first Division, A. E. F., and every man who is wearing the bronze or silver button, the insignia of service in the military or naval forces of the United States during the World War. Never will he forget the thrill, the joy and the sadness for the buddy who had "gone west," on that day when the official word went out that the war had ended and the days of war, horror and strife had given way to a life of peace and the pursuit of happiness.

MILITARY POLICE WILL WORK AGAIN

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 10.—The dreaded "M. P." will shine in all his glory again during the Washington conference.

While the American soldier is an excellent fighting man, he is a bit careless about his dress and is prone to overlook an unfastened button and little details. Col. C. S. Babcock, chief of staff of the army district of Washington, is determined that the privates and officers shall look their best in the presence of the foreign plenipotentiaries.

So he is assembling a young army of "M. P.'s," who will patrol the city in search of offenders. The "M. P." will be empowered to correct and, if necessary, arrest anyone from gobs to buck privates and generals.

"GOOD WILL TO MEN"

WHAT PART WILL SPIRITUAL TAKE IN ARMS CONFERENCE

Glendale Clergymen Give Their Views and Their Hopes as to How Much the Golden Rule of Life and the Brotherhood of Man Will Enter Into the Conclusions of the World's Master Minds During World's Greatest International Conference.

By W. E. EDMONDS
Pastor
First Presbyterian Church,
Glendale, Calif.

It will be of great interest to every praying man and woman to know that the conference at Washington will be opened with prayer. For many years, the question has been uppermost in the minds of thoughtful men, is the Christian principle

REV. WALTER E. EDMONDS

practical, or is it only a dazzling dream? Are any of the principles the brilliant suggestions of a beautiful mind? Are His commandments binding on diplomats and rulers, or are they only poetic sentences to be memorized by Sunday school boys and girls? Is the Golden Rule, for empires as well as for individuals?
Are nations to forgive, or men only?
Some of these questions will be answered through the prayers of praying people.

Many are asking, What good has the church accomplished? What truths has it succeeded in writing on the mind of the world? What has it taught? Where is its promised power? Why could it not have prevented the great war? Prayer, or the lack of prayer, may furnish the answer to many of these questions.
At least, the President seems to think that prayer does change things or he would not request all true patriots to pray. Is a man 100 per cent
American who does not pray?

This great power of prayer has always been with the church, but we must frankly admit that the church has in a large measure been recrudescent to her trust. The church has failed lamentably to do its full duty. It has spent too much of its energies on questions of ritual and government and not given the great principal of love the place which Christ gave it. However, prayer is sure to change things, for when men are willing to pay the price of prayer, God always works for the good of men and for glory of His well beloved Son.

When men ask what the church has done, let us reply that it has so sensitized the heart of the civilized world that it cries out in horror at the bloody spectacle of the World War among so-called Christian nations. There are now millions of human beings who cannot think of war except with a shudder, and with every recital of deeds of butchery there deepens a spirit of indignation and protest, which we pray may some day burn up this ancient abomination. We believe that our President believes this, otherwise he would not have called this nation to its knees.

Will the prayers of the nation spoil the fortunes of some? Are there unholy forces which desire partnership with the devil to perpetuate war?
Let hell be the answer. But the forces which are with us are mightier than those which are against us.
We have first of all thousands of Christian ministers whom the President has called to lead in this program of prayer, because they have access to the minds and hearts of millions of boys and girls, our future citizens, who can be trained to abhor war.

The request of the President finds response also among all classes of our cosmopolitan population. The wage earners of the world are with us. Fatherhood and motherhood are with us, womanhood is with us. All the noblest instincts of the human heart cry out, with trumpet-tongues, against the settlement of international disputes by human slaughter.

With such cohorts on our side, how is it possible to suffer defeat?

But, best of all, God is with us, and some day every sword will be sheathed, and nations shall make war no more. Mr. President, we respond to your call to prayer, believing that God will overrule in this conference, and that peace and true brotherhood will be the result.

By C. M. CALDERWOOD
Pastor Congregational Church, Glendale, Calif.

I cannot say what part the spiritual will play in the coming conference.
Usually, conferences of this kind

REV. C. M. CALDERWOOD

give primary importance to the economic aspects. Ordinarily, politicians do not carry the spiritual in their political life. The people want this carried into our international life, but our representatives seldom represent the best elements of our life.
Frequently, they represent the greedy and selfish interests. We must not allow it to be so at this conference.

We must let our representatives know that we want the conference to consider, not the economic aspects alone, but the moral and the spiritual.
The whole matter of heavy armaments is wrong. It puts burdens, greiv-ous to bear, upon the people of the earth. Wars are an un-Christian way of solving our problems and armaments lead to war. We hope that our representatives will be conscientious, generous and brotherly. The amount of the spiritual in the conference will depend largely upon the amount of spiritual support the Christian people of the earth give their delegates. There are selfish interests that are demanding certain things for themselves. Let us demand something good for the benefit of mankind. Other races and nations have rights which we must respect.
There are some races that need help and encouragement. If these are to be considered, we must first show some spiritual idealism.

By C. M. CRIST
Pastor First Methodist Church, Glendale, Calif.

The carnival idea should give way to patriotic address and prayer. The whole world is rioting and jazzing and the time has come for the most serious and God-fearing repentance.
Whatever may be the conviction of many as to the appropriate observance of Armistice Day, the fact remains that our very joy over peace should call us to a most devotional attitude.

The conference which is to begin in Washington between representatives of the six great nations of the earth, should be ushered in by prayer, especially throughout America.
This is distinctively a Christian nation. We believe in God. We believe that the World War was brought toward a termination because of spiritual influences. We should be constantly reminded that after President Wilson called this nation to prayer the Germans never achieved another notable victory.
If the council for the limitation of armaments is to bring about anything that is really constructive by way of a program, if these nations are led to declare for the brotherhood of mankind, it will be because of a mighty spiritual emphasis. The call of God to the people of America is for most earnest prayer. If conditions ever warranted a complete abandon of the church of Jesus Christ to a spiritual emphasis and an abject humility, before the King of all the earth, it is now.

By J. C. LIVINGSTON
Pastor Casa Verdugo Methodist Church, Glendale, Calif.

If, in the conference at Washington, adjustments are not had on a spiritual basis, there will be no adjustment on any.

In the community, which is the more potent factor for peace, the man of the clenched fist and a six-shooter at his waist, or the man of faith and prayer?

I presume that, as a preacher, I will be supposed to pronounce in favor of the man of faith and prayer.
But may I not also be permitted to say that it depends somewhat on the nature of the community. If my neighbors are all persons of faith and prayer, well and good. But, if on the other hand the brigand lives in our community, or if the majority are of a temperament that savors of pent-up chemicals that await some jar to make them sputtering volcanoes of violence, I'll feel safer in the hands of the man with the clenched fist and implements of direct action.

That's just the problem of the world. Nations that love peace and nations that love outlawry live side by side. Turkey can be an element of peace when her guns are taken away, and nationally both hands and her head are cut off. Militarism can make the machinery of war but it cannot make the machinery of peace while fear is a disturbing element between nations.

When the Prince of Peace has his way there will be no occasion for fear. He cannot have His way until we destroy that instrument of diabo-lism, "Militarism."

REV. V. H. BRINK
Pastor, Glendale Avenue M. E. Church,
Glendale, Calif.

It has been said that "war is healthful and that frequent wars are necessary in order to kill off the bad and useless and to keep down the population."

REV. V. HUNTER BRINK

To my own mind, nothing is farther from the truth. War is not now, never has been and never will be a necessity or cure for the world's hurt. War is no part of our business and the sooner we go out of it, the better for us and the world.

Some one said in the long ago, "In peace, children bury their parents, but in war, parents bury their children."

Let us be frank and confess that war has proven a failure; diplomacy for mere advantage of men or nations has proven a failure, in fact everything has failed to bring about universal peace and good will among men and nations.

Why not try out the principles as set forth by the Man of Galilee? The main question is not one of economics or conservation, so much, as it is a question of morals and religion.

The editor asks, "What part will the Spiritual play in the forth coming disarmament conference at Washington, and why?"

My answer to that is, that as the main issue is moral and spiritual, and all others merely incidental, the spiritual ought to have, ye, must have the right of way, or the lasting benefit of said conference will be negligible and futile.

The commandment reads: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thy self," that means nations as well as individuals. So I would say, the only possible chance for the end sought at this conference, viz: The end of war is by way of the spiritual—not in the abstract but in the concrete—by the reinforcement of the Golden Rule and the application of the principles of that matchless Sermon on the Mount, not only between individuals, but between nations as well.

REV. HARLEY C. PRESTON
Pastor Pacific Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Glendale

At Washington, the stage is set and the whole world is looking on and nations are anxiously waiting for the curtain to rise wondering how well their representatives will play their respective parts as actors. The actors are men.

Man is spirit. His body is merely the house in which that spirit dwells.
And that spirit may be good or evil, generous or selfish, narrow and self-centered or broad and charitable toward those not of his household, country or race. It is for man to decide whether his spirit shall be directed and controlled by the powers of good or evil. He is the master of his own destiny and if great power is conferred on him he frequently controls the destinies of nations.

The delegates to the disarmament conference are just men, but they are statesmen, placed in positions of tremendous power and influence, and the world holds its breath in suspense awaiting their findings. Their decision will likely be according to the spiritual ideals to which they and the nations they represent are committed.
I feel particularly free in stating that if the nations and their representatives in this conference will be controlled by that oneness of spirit and unity of purpose which alone made victory possible in the great war for civilization, then we shall not learn war any more but we will love and trust each other, and live as God intended, recognizing the common Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man.

By H. C. FUNK
Pastor First Lutheran Church, Glendale, Calif.

This old world of ours is doomed, if it continues its present war system for settling international disputes.
The elements of fear, envy and distrust are the fundamental causes of war. We have learned by bitter experience that "preparedness" does

DR. H. C. FUNK

not guarantee peace, it produces war and weakens our economic resources.
The problem is a spiritual one.
Spiritual disarmament must prepare the way for physical disarmament.
Religion is a spirit that binds people together; and the spirit of Christ can so transform the hearts and wills of men that hatred, greed, selfishness and suspicion will disappear.

CARLO SCHANZER TO BE IMPORTANT AT BIG CONFERENCE

League of Nations Expert Will be One of Italy's Delegates to Parley

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—In Carlo Schanzer of the Italian delegation at the Washington disarmament conference, it will have its League of Nations expert.

Although the United States has succeeded in keeping itself aloof from As a matter of fact the international relations of all the leading nations of the world, with the above three exceptions, are now so involved and so interwoven with the League of Nations that no single nation is in a position to enter freely into other international projects without first determining whether these conflict with its duties, obligations and interests in the League.

As a consequence European visitors are certain that the League of Nations is going to bob up at the Washington conference. In any event, in whatever form the League question bobs up at Washington, Schanzer is here to put them right on the subject. He is Italy's League expert. He has been one of the Italian delegates to both of the League's assemblies, and with the possible exception of Tittoni at the first assembly, has played a more active part in the League than any other Italian. His French is as fluent and as eloquent as his Italian, and his English only a little behind both.

He is a typical example of the Italian self-made man—self-made men in Italy running more to acquiring culture at their own expense than to making money.

He was born at Vienna fifty-six years ago. Entering politics he served as deputy during four different legislatures. Later he became minister of posts and telegraphs and finally in Nitti's third cabinet was minister of the treasury. He is professor of constitutional law at the University of Rome and has published several volumes on War Rights and Treaties. He is also a senator.

DISARMAMENT WILL MEAN LITTLE FOR GERMAN PEOPLE

Already Disarmed People Not Concerned by Outcome of Parley

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Germany stripped of her own armaments, is worrying little as to whether or not the Washington disarmament conference succeeds in stripping other nations of theirs.

That is to say, the man in the street knows little about the conference, for the German daily press has carried only brief, uninteresting notices of the preparations for this momentous session, and he fails to realize just where the meeting can affect him.

On the other hand, thinking men of Germany welcome the conference, for they feel that it can perhaps reach some agreement whereby Germany will not be under the oppressive and disturbing influence of French militarism. Such men contend that Germany would be able better to pay her obligations if she were not constantly threatened with new penalties by an army to the west whose upbuilding has been considerable in the past two years.

Germans of this frame of mind hold, too, that present day Germany is prepared to give adequate guarantees for keeping the peace. The feeling in Germany against France is strong, just as in France Germany is thoroughly hated. Yet, thinking Germans say that a new war is not wanted, and that Germany is ready to prove this in any way satisfactory to the allies.

On the other hand, Germany hopes that France will not be allowed to argue, unfettered, that she must upbuild her militarism to protect against Germany. Germany contends she is stripped of armament, and surely as things now stand she is in no position to wage a new war. That, of course, does not preclude the chance of a later outburst, for in modern times any industrial nation can be converted into a war machine.

They call it a "girl's finishing school," because sometimes it is the "finish" of a girl's usefulness.

What Part Will Spiritual Play

To obtain peace, the world must follow the example and teaching of Christ, who declared that "the meek shall inherit the earth." International good will, based on the Golden Rule, will restore the dove of peace, establish a world court of justice and result in universal reduction of arms.

By ERNEST E. FORD
Pastor First Baptist Church, Glendale, Calif.

"Not by might nor by power, but my Spirit, saith the Lord."

Might never settles anything right. And if a difficulty is not settled right it is unsettled. Might engenders hate, fear, revenge. Not until nations stop hating and fearing and suspecting each other, can we expect any lasting good to come of this meeting at Washington. The words of Dr. Charles E. Jefferson in his book, "What the War Is Teaching," ought to be taken very much to heart. The world has had three historic scourges—famine, pestilence and war. Each one numbers its victims by the tens of millions. Commerce killed famine. Its quick transportation by land and sea has saved unnumbered lives and left famine like a dead snake by the side of the road, along which humanity has marched up to the present day. But commerce is also the servant of war—she masses great armies and keeps them supplied with the tools of carnage. Science killed pestilence. The black plague, cholera, smallpox, yellow fever, have all received their death blow. Science did the work. But science also invented the deadly bomb and the means of carrying it over cities and dropping it on innocent women and children; she invented the invisible gas which will creep unseen into the midst of living men and women and wrap its deadly coils about them. No, science cannot stop war any more than commerce. They are giant agents to obey the mandate of the commander; he may be good or bad. What, then, will stop war? There is only one power in all the world that is sufficient to put an end to the butchery of one man by his fellow-man, and that is the power that the Heavenly Father put into the hearts of men by His Spirit. Heart power has not kept pace with horsepower and candlepower. The great giants of possibilities for good are in the hands of old sins—greed, selfish ambition, cruelty. What is needed is a vision of Jesus Christ giving His life for His enemies. A willingness to open our hearts and let His spirit of good will, justice, truthfulness, and cooperation enter and rule our lives. Our only hope lies in the possibility of the Son of God being invited to a place at the world's council table.

peace were born with the founder of the Christian religion, Jesus of Nazareth. Any expectation to effect a lasting disarmament of nations that is based on our present status of civilization or on a comity of nations, and leaves out the spiritual dynamic that alone can change men's hearts, is a far, far cry. However, we believe that the principles of Christ have been sufficiently tried among the leaders of so-called Christian nations that it is possible to begin now a limitation of armaments. That it will not be possible to think of total disarmament and of a final tribunal of nations to adjudicate the trying problems of international life, until more men are changed at heart, goes without saying, to any thoughtful man.

It is not commonly known that the largest influence in calling the conference of nations that will meet this week in Washington was that of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. The pressure of the churches of America upon the President, urging him to call the conference and promising support in the tremendous undertaking, was the big factor in his decision to do so. Christian men are our own representatives. Christian men make up most of the representatives of European countries. The promulgation of peace is a Christian principle. The spiritual will loom large in the conference, or if it does not, we are as surely doomed to defeat as though the nations of the world had refused to participate in the discussion.

Then, thousands upon thousands are praying, praying in every tongue and wherever hearts that ever pray are thrilled with the hope that men shall learn war no more. "There is nothing so powerful in all the world as an idea whose hour is come." The idea first expressed by Hebrew prophet and promised in Jesus Christ, is coming to full bloom ere another generation shall pass away. Yes, the spiritual shall loom large in the coming conference. Christ shall walk in its councils.

RADIUM NOT CURE CANCER SAYS DOCTOR

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Is radium, hailed by the medical profession as a panacea for the deadly cancerous diseases, a failure?

It is, according to Sir Thomas Parkinson, a noted specialist and physician to Lloyd George, in an interview upon his arrival in New Zealand.

It is not, according to other London specialists, who term Sir Thomas' statement, "nonsense."

"Radium is a failure," Sir Thomas said. "It is not only not effective as a remedy, but it is dangerous, because its burning effect aggravates, instead of curing disease. Many leading surgeons have discarded it in favor of X-rays."

The Household Budget; A BUSINESS INSTITUTION!

THE housewife who saves FIRST—saves MOST. The money spent unnecessarily is the rock upon which many households are wrecked.

THE household that is operated on a business basis is the one that keeps a faithful record of income and expenditures and shows at the end of the month a net profit of from ten to twenty per cent on the month's business.

THE household with an income of $200 per month ordinarily should save from $20 to $40 per month, and that NET PROFIT should be represented in a SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNT.

YOU cannot save money and spend it, too. When the weekly or monthly income is received, ten or twenty per cent should be at once set aside as the main and chief EXPENSE ITEM. It should be deposited in a SAVINGS ACCOUNT and regarded as the prime and necessary EXPENSE.

HOUSEHOLDERS should prepare a budget for each month's expense and adhere strictly to it. Unusual expenditures can very largely be forestalled by the household budget. In preparing your household budget, include a column for SAVINGS (make it the very first column), another for groceries and meat, furniture and utensils, clothing, doctor and medicine, church and charities, theatres and amusements, candy and cigars, motor car upkeep and renewals, insurance and lodge dues, and a miscellaneous column for unusual items.

THE household that is operated by ear instead of by note is the household that has nothing to show for numerous expenditures during a month or a year. The greatest question in the American household is, "WHERE DOES ALL THE MONEY GO?"

THE average business man is thrifty and a good plumber in stopping leaks in his office or his store, but a very poor "aid and comfort" in his business relations at home. He gives his wife a sum of money whenever she needs it or he hands her a check at the end of the week and wonders how much the next "touch" will be for.

THE AMERICAN HOME needs a firm business foundation, whether it is a rented home or owned by its occupants. There is too much "penny wise and pound foolishness."

WE are ready at all times and will be happy to advise you how to create a household budget and operate your home on a business basis. We will help you to make your house-keeping something more than getting up, getting breakfast, washing dishes, getting lunch, washing dishes again, getting supper and washing more dishes. When you have a schedule upon which to operate, where every transaction in the household counts for something accomplished, the matter of keeping house will be transformed into a matter of getting more than results—you will get profits.

IT has often been said that if you want it done RIGHT—let the women do it. We have an abiding faith that the women of Glendale and vicinity will be interested in our plan to operate the home at a profit.

PATIENCE is one of the greatest human elements. Patience has saved thousands of dollars and thousands of lives. Patient adherence to an ideal has glorified an endless number of lives. Patience is what American people need—there is too much jazzomania in America.

SET for yourself a task to accomplish certain things before old age bends you low. Read the following table and see what $1 per week, deposited in a savings bank, will do for you in one, two, three, four, five and ten years. Here is the table; glance over it.

Weekly Deposit	1 year	2 years	3 years	4 years	5 years	10 years
$1.00	$53.05	$108.24	$165.65	$225.38	$287.53	$629.04

OPEN a savings account for your children and for yourselves. Pile up a fund for a college course for your children that they may be equipped with something no one can take from them when they enter the world of competitive business.

REMEMBER—the way to save MOST is to save FIRST. The sum of $1 opens an account.

"Rush Hours"

In all lines of business patronage is irregular. Street cars, stores, banks and restaurants have their "rush hours" when some delays in service are unavoidable. The public, with the situation before its eyes, good naturedly accepts a degree of inconvenience.

There are "rush hours" in a telephone exchange. With business service the "loads" of telephone traffic are determined by commercial activities, banking hours, etc.—the "load" of the residence telephone varies with household and social needs.

The demands upon the telephone operator and a complicated mechanical equipment cannot be seen, but telephone traffic varies in every hour of every day according to the individual desires of thousands of patrons.

If there should be at times a delay in answering your call, remember that trained young women with nimble fingers are doing their best to serve you, and that at the moment there may be a "rush" of telephone traffic.

The exercise of patience and consideration will mean better service.

PROHIBITION WILL TAKE BACK SEAT DURING PARLEY

Foreign Visitors Classed as Diplomats May Bring Own
Stock of Liquor to U. S.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Prohibition in the nation's capital will take a back seat for the period of the armament conference.

From November 12, the opening date of the convention, until the termination of the conference, Washington will be, perhaps, one of the wettest cities in the world—and Prohibition officials will be powerless to prevent it.

The members of the conference and their retinue of clerks, exclusive of the American delegation, will be immune from all Prohibition laws of this country, as they will come under the head of the Diplomatic Corps, which is specifically exempted by the law.

Already the vanguard of several of the participating nations in the conference have arrived and are arranging the details for the arrival of the main delegations from their respective countries. These arrangements, it is said, include provision for having ample liquid refreshment for the foreign delegates to the conference. Huge supplies of champagne, wines and liquors have either arrived or are on the way from Europe to alleviate the thirst of the tired, weary members of the conference at the conclusion of the day, to be consumed at meal times, taken as "appetizers," or imbibed at intervals throughout some particularly strenuous day when "spirits" are deemed necessary to sustain the members' spirits.

Prohibition officials in Washington are in a quandary as the result of being unable to settle definitely upon some plan to keep Washington "dry," exclusive of the privileged foreign visitors, during the period of the conference. As a precautionary measure they have advised the management of Washington hotels that they will be held to strict accountability for drinking that goes on in their dining rooms. The various hotels here have been warned that any hostelry convicted of refusing to recognize the public drinking by their patrons in the dining room will be closed for one year, under the provisions of the National Prohibition act. In addition, the Federal Prohibition Office has served notice to the different hotel establishments that they will be held to strict accountability for the health and safety of guests in their rooms who obtain whisky and other alcoholic stimulants from bellboys.

Officials Are Stumped
Through these edicts issued to the hotels here and the rigid enforcement of the Prohibition law it is hoped by Prohibition officials to curtail to a minimum drinking by others than the foreign members of the conference. Concerted raids on alleged "blind alleys," establishments charged with dispensing paraphernalia and ingredients used in the distilling of whisky, and the wholesale round-up of alleged bootleggers have been in progress for some time here, with a view to making it as difficult as possible to obtain outlaw alcoholic stimulants during the time the Armament Conference will be in session. This vigilance is to be maintained stringent, it was stated.

No matter how successful Prohibition officials are in their efforts to keep the dispensing and consumption of "bootleg" liquors at a minimum while the conference is going on, the fact remains that said, dignified Washington will be one of the wettest centers of the world during this time, due to the fact that the foreign members of the conference who are immune to American Prohibition laws have and still are stocking in enormous supplies of liquors and wines. It is estimated that when the conference is at its height there will be almost as much liquor in Washington as there ever was at any one time during the wettest of pre-prohibition days.

And a large portion, if not all, of this liquor will be unmoistened, consumed within the shadow of the building from which emanated the Prohibition law, and almost under the nose of Representative Volstead, the author and chief proponent of the law that bears his name.

CERRITOS VOLLEY CAMPUS ACTIVE

Girls Show Much Interest in Their Scores, Intermediate Winning

A lively volley game was played on Cerritos campus by the first teams of Cerritos and Intermediate, the visiting team winning with a score of 30 to 23. Both teams did splendid work. The Intermediate team was composed of Barbara Kranz, Ruth Ranes, Eleanor Kopp, Virginia Rowley, Consuello Mirano, Bernice Collins, Zella Koehner, Dorothy Hertzog and Dorothy Campbell.

Members of Cerritos team were Harriet Light, captain, Pearl Mentzer, Marjorie Gibbly, Martha Hartzell, Eleanor Carpenter, Mary Jane La Point, Louise Kopp, Thelma Rucker, Ruth Wilson and Julia Steelman.

Next Wednesday afternoon Cerritos midget and senior teams will play return games on the Intermediate grounds with the midget and second teams of Intermediate volley ball players.

The Cerritos senior team played a return game with the Eagle Rock team at Eagle Rock last Monday and won with a score of 30 to 12.

A CHALLENGE

The writer of this advertisement is J. R. Ervey, who under the miscellaneous columns in the local papers has been advertising to make any ordinary adjustment on a sewing machine anywhere in this city for $1.00.

He has made hundreds of calls in Glendale, Burbank and Eagle Rock, and he challenges a single instance where entire satisfaction was not given. If not, he stands ready to refund any money collected.

WHY?

Because there is no excuse for our not doing so, as he has had 30 years' experience in the sewing machine business and gives every detail of the business his PERSONAL ATTENTION. Our only desire is to treat every one in an honorable and businesslike manner. We own our home, and conduct our business from there. Why? BECAUSE we own our home and conduct our business from there we save $150 a month overhead and can afford to give the customer the benefit.

SUMMING UP

NOW LADIES, LISTEN. DON'T WORRY! WE CAN FIX IT. We will still continue to adjust any make sewing machine in the city at $1.00. Tell all your sewing machine troubles to us, of whatever nature.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

We offer our services GRATIS for adjusting the machines of any Ladies' Aid Societies or Charitable Institutions.

MACHINES FOR RENT

WE ALWAYS have on hand a stock of machines which we RENT BY THE MONTH.

USED MACHINES

We also have for sale a large stock of used machines of different makes, every one GUARANTEED TO BE AS REPRESENTED.

NEW MACHINES

We are agents for the famous Rotary White, both stand and electric, which are sold on very easy terms.

We have perfected arrangements whereby should you buy a new machine, we are able to make you a liberal allowance for your old machine which you possibly left in the East. Note—In a White you have TWO MACHINES IN ONE, as we can supply a chain stitch attachment which works perfectly.

BUY THAT LOT

Secure that lot before it is too late. A year ago there were any number of desirable close-in residence lots. Today they are few and far between. The prices of these good lots have increased during the past year from 25 per cent to 50 per cent. So buy that lot NOW. These lots can never be cheaper than they are today.

Buy that property in Glendale NOW. To delay until tomorrow may mean a loss of $1000 or more. Here's the reason: The eyes of the entire country are turned longingly toward Glendale. This is a city of good climate, good people, good schools, good public utilities, good realty values, good homes and good will. The outside world is beginning to realize the fact and for this reason realty values are sure to advance.

Glendale real estate is one of the safest investments in the world, for this city is sure to go ahead. During the past two years the population of Glendale has almost doubled. Realty prices, in many instances, have trebled. She cannot and WILL NOT stop now. It is too late to take a backward step. Will realty values double in the next two years? Every indication shouts aloud "YES."

BUY THAT HOUSE

Buy that home today. Homes in Glendale are bringing better prices now than a year or two ago, everything points toward a substantial increase during the next few months. A home priced at $5000 today may be marked $6000 tomorrow. You'll never be able to buy cheaper, so why run the risk of an advance? That's sound business logic.

American Delegates for Big Conference Are All Well Trained Diplomats

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 10.—

There are people in Washington who, having looked over the Department of State as now constituted and the American delegation to the Conference for the Limitation of Armaments, believe that the era of shirt-sleeve diplomacy has gone forever.

No one, for example, would regard Charles Evans Hughes as a shirt-sleeve diplomat. He is a man of impeccable manners, who has a just conception of the proper dignity that should hedge a Secretary of State. The fact is, of course, that our Secretaries of State, as our Presidents, have always—or almost always—managed to rise to meet the demands of their office. Not that there is any question of Mr. Hughes' extreme fitness for this post, but one would not have to go back very far into American history to discover one or two secretaries whose rising was not so conspicuous and whose shirt-sleeves were a good deal in evidence.

When the Conference for the Limitation of Armaments meets and Washington is full of Prime Ministers, Foreign Ministers, princes, field marshals and hordes of lesser magnificos the United States Government will be able to step forth as host with men to represent it who are inferior neither in diplomatic experience or in cosmopolitan knowledge of the world to those of any European delegation.

Secretary Hughes Brilliant Thinker

The Secretary of State, it is true, has not had a long diplomatic career, but such a career, observers point out, does not necessarily mean clearness and directness of thought—"thinking through," as Secretary Hughes himself would call it. The lucidity and simplicity of Mr. Hughes' mental processes will be more than a match, it is thought, for anything that may be imported into Washington.

Besides, the conference isn't going to be an affair of barter, bicker and concessions, so one hears.

Since the question of the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance betook itself so neatly from the international foreground, the diplomatic corps in Washington has had little patience for references to American "shirt-sleeve" diplomacy, and one hears intimations that many of the corps are now studying the Hughes method with a view to possible improvement of their own professional knowledge.

If Mr. Hughes is not a shirt-sleeve diplomat, neither does he go to an other extreme and think in terms of frills and frontiers. Those who have had the opportunity of observing him at close range expect him to impress European statesmen as being a fine type of American in public office, appreciative of the niceties of international intercourse.

Root No Shirt-Sleeve Diplomat

Elihu Root, the second member of the American delegation, cannot be regarded as a shirt-sleeve diplomat, either—not by a long stretch of the imagination. Mr. Root is a simple man in his personal manners, but he carries about with him an air of being internationally minded, of seeing a situation as a whole. Many stories are told of the remarkable impression created by Mr. Root upon foreign statesmen. He met some of them at The Hague in connection with conferences looking toward world peace, and his selection to be a member of the Permanent Court of International Justice—an honor which he was forced to decline—is regarded as a natural sequel to his international popularity.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts has been accorded many epithets, not a few of which were undoubtedly intended to be sarcastic. Among these have been such appellations as "Yankee Aristocrat" and the "Codfish Duke." There has been practically no disposition even among Senator Lodge's political enemies, however, to deny his thorough familiarity with foreign affairs. Those who have an intimate acquaintance with Washington will attest to the popularity of Senator Lodge with the diplomatic corps. Contrary to the idea rather prevalent in some quarters outside of Washington, Mr. Lodge is one of the most accessible of public men.

Lodge Watches Foreign Affairs

During practically the whole of his public career Mr. Lodge has taken a profound interest in foreign affairs, and this interest, coupled with his long service on the Foreign Relations Committee, his extensive travels and his voluminous correspondence with connections in various foreign countries has given him a deep insight into diplomacy, past, present and future.

As for Senator Underwood, the other member of the American delegation, he, too, is the direct antithesis of all that is connoted by the—as it were—chemist phrase. Quiet, almost reserved, he is always convincing, and in the past he has invariably proved influential in gatherings where he has chosen to exert his talents. In the United States Senate it is said of him that he leads without appearing to do so.

PAIR RETURN FROM DANCE ARE KILLED

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 10.—Miss Jennie Cameron, pretty 23-year-old bookkeeper, and Robert J. Walters, 20, rent car driver, are dead today as the result of an auto crash. The couple were returning from a dance. Walters, driving rapidly, attempted to round a sharp curve at El Cajon, near this city. The auto plunged off the highway, struck a tree, and crushed both occupants to death.

INVESTIGATE ROBBERIES

MONROVIA, Nov. 10.—Police were today investigating six robberies in the business section of the city, committed apparently by the same band of thieves.

Glendale People are Buying at Angelus Park Why?

The reason for buying Angelus Park lots is apparent to Glendale people who pass this Tract daily in their travels to Los Angeles. New houses are being started daily, about 80 new bungalows were built in the past few months at Angelus Park. Within the year as many more will be erected. Shortly this beautiful section will be built solidly. What then will be the value of lots that today can be bought on very easy terms at

Angelus Park is located on Glendale Boulevard in Los Angeles, snug up against Glendale City boundaries. Just across the line in Glendale, the same quality lots are being sold from $1200 to $3000. Directly across the boulevard, lots in Atwater Tract are selling at $1200 and higher. You can plainly see the reason why these lots are in demand at present low prices. If you want a lot for a home or for an investment or speculation

Visit Angelus Park

These lots are positively the best values now offered. You will make money by heeding this announcement, by making a selection of one of these lots. You should at least investigate.

Take Glendale car to Richardson stop Tract Office on the corner of Seneca and Glendale Boulevard. Agents there daily.

DON'T OVERLOOK THIS OPPORTUNITY

THE term "Memorial Park" has long been defined as that place that has within its confines every form of interment, viz: cemetery, crematory and mausoleum, under one ownership and one management. Forest Lawn is the only institution of its kind in Los Angeles County.

One ownership of all forms of interment permits the exchange of property. For example, should a purchaser of a cemetery lot later decide for the mausoleum form of interment, he can return his lot and receive full credit for the price paid on his new purchase. The same principle of exchange holds true to all our property.

THEY DID NOT DIE IN VAIN!

LINCOLN was WRONG when he said: "the world will soon forget what we say today," when he made his celebrated Gettysburg speech, honoring the brave heroes of the Civil War.

The world did not forget what he said and the world did not forget the heroes who wore the BLUE in our civil strife. Today, the men who wore the blue are walking hand-in-hand down the long, long trail to the MYSTERY OVER YONDER. They have forgotten, but the world has not forgotten their valor, for they fought for what they thought was righteous settlement of their differences.

Today, historic words will be said by our President, Warren G. Harding, who within a few hours will deliver the oration over the remains of the Unknown Hero, whose mortal body is symbolizing the GREAT SACRIFICE of all American Heroes in the World War.

We will not forget the boys who gave their lives, nor will we forget those who OFFERED TO GIVE THEIR LIVES to prevent the soldiers of the greatest tyrant of all time from invading our homes and putting the yoke of Autocracy around our necks.

All Hail, the Heroes of America. All Hail, the mothers, sisters and wives of the World War Heroes. Freedom in America did not perish. The World War Heroes made America safe for Americans and the home of the free.

"GOOD WILL TO MEN"

OPEN DOOR IS CHIEF BULWARK IN FAR EASTERN MATTERS

American Delegates Keep This End in View During Arms Parley

Washington, Nov. 10.—The "open door" doctrine is regarded by the American government as the chief bulwark of Far Eastern peace.

For this reason the American government considers the re-establishment and strengthening of this policy which declares that every nation shall have an equal opportunity in the east as one of the paramount objects of the arms conference.

This statement was made to the United Press today on the highest authority. Limitation of armaments would be dangerous and might breed rather than prevent war unless it was preceded by a definite understanding that all of Asia is to be open to all alike for commercial enterprises, and in addition free from political domination that might threaten to bring about a trade monopoly, it was stated.

Special agreements like the Anglo-Japanese alliance therefore are regarded unfavorably by this government.

The American delegation will frankly urge scrapping of the Anglo-Japanese treaty.

A united effort to force consideration of arms limitation by the conference until these Far Eastern questions have been definitely settled will be opposed by this government. It is clearly understood here that Japan might be entirely willing to discuss naval limitations but balk on the other questions.

Nevertheless the American delegation intends to insist that until potential causes of discord have been removed, it would be folly for any nation to throw away its guns.

The American delegation will be given full assurance that this government will not endanger the country's safety by yielding to a purely idealistic hope that reduction of arms in itself will eliminate war dangers.

A high personage discussing the whole question at length with the United Press, gave this outline of the American point of view:

The United States, as the world

PRaised GOD VOICE CAME TO SOLDIER AT BIG REVIVAL

After Specialists Failed, Soldier Tries Faith and God Kept Faith With Him

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 10.—John W. Sproul of 826 Cherokee street, is able to talk now for the first time in three years. It was on one of the battlefields of France that he was severely gassed three years ago. After leaving a hospital he came home and has since been examined by a number of noted specialists, but neither Government nor private doctors were able to restore his speech.

The other night he attended the revival services being held by the Bosworth brothers, evangelists, in Sheridan, a Pittsburgh suburb. After the service he went up to the platform for prayer with the evangelists.

"If you have genuine faith in God, praise Him," one of the evangelists said.

That instant Sproul says his voice was restored and he praised God.

"I am going to continue to praise God all my life; why shouldn't I?" he said to an interviewer.

THIS LITTLE ITEM FOR ABSTAINERS

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 10.—Once famous for the "beer that made Milwaukee famous," Milwaukee came into its own again today when the first bottle of "medicinal" beer was bottled. The Schlitz Brewery, one of the first in the United States to obtain a permit to manufacture medicinal beer, has filled, sealed and labeled its first bottle under the new regulations.

knows, has no selfish interests in the Far East. It is sincerely the friend of all the peoples there. Nevertheless, it is not blind to the facts of history, particularly as made by the Japanese government in its dealings with its neighbors. It believes Japan must be brought to see that its hope for the future lies in honesty and fair dealing and a square deal for all the Asiatic peoples.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC WILL STOP TRAINS DURING SERVICE

Passenger, Freight Trains and Boats All Stop For Two Minute Period

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—All freight and passenger trains and steamers operated by the Southern Pacific in the territory bounded by Portland, Ore., Ogden, Utah, and El Paso, Texas, will stop for two minutes between 9 and 9.02 a. m. to mark Armistice Day. Orders to that effect were issued by President Sproule of the Southern Pacific. Ferry steamers operated by the company if en route will stop regardless of where they are. All shops, maintenance of way and other departments will close similarly.

WAR PICTURES ARE MOST INTERESTING

One of the finest exhibitions of war pictures ever to be seen in Glendale is on exhibition in the windows of Rich's Auto Supply store, corner Colorado and Brand. In this collection there are 22 pictures, which include the partial or complete destruction of all makes of air planes, both German and Allies. Some of these are planes that were shot down in engagements in which Capt. Sid. Gane, who took all of these pictures across the "pond," took place.

Capt. Gane is a flying ace, having no less than seven German planes officially to his credit. He was in the service for three years and took part in nearly 75 aerial encounters.

TRAIN DERAILED
GUTHRIE, Okla., Nov. 10.—Several persons were injured when a south-bound Santa Fe passenger train was derailed a few miles north of here. One chair car and three sleepers left the track and turned over. Those seriously injured included Edith Smith, Colorado Springs, Colo. The less seriously hurt included Lena and Carrie Smith, Colorado Springs.

The Unknown Soldier By Angela Morgan

HE is known to the sun-white Majesties
Who stand at the gates of dawn;
He is known to the cloud-borne company
Whose souls but late have gone.
Like wind-flung stars through lattice bars
They throng to greet their own,
With voice of flame they sound his name
Who died to us unknown.

HE is hailed by the time-crowned brotherhood,
By the Dauntless of Marathon,
By Raymond, Godfrey and Lion Heart, Whose dreams he carried on.
His name they call through the heavenly hall,
Unheard by earthly ear.
He is claimed by the famed in Arcady
Who knew no title here.

OH faint was the lamp of Sirius,
And dim was the Milky Way.
Oh far was the floor of Paradise
From the soil where the soldier lay.
Oh chill and stark was the crimson dark
Where huddled men lay deep;
His comrades all denied his call—
Long had they lain asleep.

OH strange how the lamp of Sirius
Drops low to the dazzled eyes;
Oh strange how the steel-red battlefields
Are floors of Paradise.
Oh strange how the ground with never a sound Swings open, tier on tier,
And standing there in the morning air
Are the friends he cherished here.

THEY are known to the sun-shod sentinels
Who circle the morning's door.
They are led by a cloud-bright company
Through paths unseen before.
Like blossoms blown their souls have flown.
Past war and reeking sod.
In the book unbound their names are found—
They are known in the courts of God!

SCHOOL FLOAT WILL CAUSE APPLAUSE PARADE TODAY

Girls and Boys Will Ride in Motor Vehicle for Glendale Schools

Much interest is being shown in the float that is being constructed to represent the Glendale public schools in the big parade today. This float was designed by Mrs. Mary O. Ryan, principal of the Broadway school, and is being constructed by E. W. Evans, who is connected with the Endicott & Larson company. Mr. Evans, it will be remembered, constructed the floats that represented Glendale at the last Rose tournament at Pasadena where it took first honors, and also the float that won first prize in the Elks' parade in Los Angeles.

This new float, which will carry 16 girls and 3 boys, is being decorated by the Parent-Teachers' Association. It will be 22 feet long and will surely create a sensation in the parade to be held today.

RED CROSS WORK IS FOR ALL HUMANITY

Interesting Work Done in This Section Is Related
by Miss Smith

"Humanitarian work done by Red Cross chapters for families and individuals stands out as one of the big things of the peacetime program," said Miss Smith, representative from Pacific Division headquarters.

"Through the efforts of the Santa Cruz Chapter public health nursing service, a little girl is on the road to health and strength after years of suffering as the result of infantile paralysis. When the Santa Cruz chapter found little Rowena, she was eight years old, and had been a sufferer since she was three. Arrangements were made to place her in the University of California Hospital, where she was operated upon, and after three weeks returned to her home where

RESTRICTIVE WARS AT LEAST COME FROM PARLEY

Gas, Germs, Airships, Submarines Will Be Barred From Future Wars

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Restriction of the horrors of modern war—such as use of gas and germs, airships and submarines—will doubtless come before the arms limitation conference.

The American conference will be fully equipped to consider such a theme, government authorities said today. For they will have the advantage of the best technical opinion on these matters. Connected with the technical advisers is, for instance, Brig. Gen. Amos A. Fries, head of the chemical warfare service, who will be prepared to inform the delegates as to possibilities of wiping out combatants and non-combatants with gases and chemicals. He can, for instance, show how one drop of the so-called "honey dew" would wipe out persons in the immediate vicinity.

Both the army and navy will have the services of air experts. Brig. Gen. William Mitchell will act for the army and Rear Admiral William A. Moffat for the navy. Thus far there is no disposition to limit these new weapons and new methods.

she remained for a month's rest. She was then sent back to the hospital for further treatment and from there to Drexel Hall, at Palo Alto, where she can be under the constant supervision of Dr. Markel. Rowena's mother is very happy over her wonderful improvement and the child's one ambition is to be a Red Cross nurse and help little children.

"In Santa Ana, the Red Cross nursing service has taken care of many patients who cannot afford nursing care, and all have expressed great appreciation to the Red Cross.

"In Watsonville, Cal., a stranded destitute family was given necessary relief, clean clothes and transportation to their former home in Salt Lake City.

"These are just a few instances to illustrate the kind of work that the Red Cross is doing every day. Every person securing a Red Cross membership is aiding in the continuation of Red Cross service."

DECREASE IN ARMS OR EXPECT MORE GREAT WARS

England's Greatest Ecclesiastic Authority Sees Chance for Disaster

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Without disarmament the League of Nations fails, and disarmament, through the Washington conference, can be made possible only if the combined religious sentiment and Powers of the world are united in the later-day crusade to that end.

Such is the gist of the belief of Lord Parmoor, who struck out boldly for international adjustments and a sane policy of reconstruction immediately after the armistice. An early supporter of the League of Nations and the greatest ecclesiastic authority in Britain, Lord Parmoor fathered the first humanitarian movement in which the people of the Allies and of the Central Powers were jointly represented after the war, the "Fight the Famine Council," of which he is president. He is also president of the World's Peace Council.

In an interview granted the International News Service, he expressed himself very strongly against any political jockeying interfering with the work of disarmament. "The religious societies of Great Britain and the United States, whatever may be their creed, color or race," he said, "must unite and insist on the Washington conference achieving the ideals for which it was planned."

"The Christians should take the lead, bury prejudice, and act in accordance with the peaceful teachings of our faith."

"The League of Nations cannot function as a medium for peace so long as armaments are maintained at their present level and so-called negotiations are put forward under a threat of force. I refer particularly to the disastrous war in Asia Minor and the occupation of German towns on the Rhine."

"No league or association of nations is able to exercise, under present conditions, any effective supervision in international affairs."

"Naturally it must take time to erase the spirit of war from races, especially among those who owe their greatness to military deeds. In my opinion there is only one appeal that can be made to put a stop to this race for armaments, which is provocative of one thing only, that is, war, and that is to appeal to the religious forces of the two great continents."

"I assume it is not necessary to emphasize the absolute consistency of the Christian teaching of brotherhood as opposed to war of violence. On this there can be no difference of belief between the religious forces of the world."

"Let the appeal be made to them, and if they are guided by the teachings of their creed, whatever that might be, there can be none other than a happy ending to the Washington conference."

"Should the appeal to the religious side fail and the conference fail to stop armaments there can only be one result—war."

FIRST LADY IS MOST GRACIOUS TO ONE WHO MISSED WAY

YONKERS, N. Y., Nov. 10.—How the "first lady of the land" came to her rescue when she intruded upon the monthly luncheon party of Senators' wives during a visit to Washington, was told here by Mrs. Harold S. Robinson, member of the executive council of the Girl Scouts in this city.

Mrs. Robinson said the incident through which she met Mrs. Harding was characteristic of the mistress of the White House. Mrs. Robinson was in the capital to attend the Ku Klux Klan hearings in the House of office building. She left the building at noon for lunch and through error entered the Senate office building upon her return.

Seeing a group of fashionably-dressed women at lunch she started to leave, but was intercepted by a guard, who told her to return and look around, as Mrs. Harding was among the women present.

An Act of Impertinence!
"I started to walk away when a woman approached and asked me if I was the wife of a Senator. You can imagine my feelings when, upon receiving my negative reply, she drew herself up and in a penetrating voice said: 'Then you are committing an act of great impertinence in being here!' While I was attempting to explain and apologize I was touched on the arm and a voice asked if I was a stranger in the city. I said I was and was startled to hear my interrogator say: 'Why, then, I would like to extend to you a welcome to Washington. I am Mrs. Harding.'"

"We talked a few minutes and when I was leaving Mrs. Harding invited me to have tea with her the following Friday. I accepted and Mrs. Harding was as gracious as she had been at the time of the unfortunate occurrence. We discussed the Girl Scout movement, in which Mrs. Harding is intensely interested."

"The luncheon party into which I stumbled by mistake is a monthly affair given by the wives of Senators, and as Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the former Vice-President, was in Washington that day, Mrs. Harding was present."

NAME MRS. STILLMAN
NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Anne U. Stillman today was appointed guardian with her attorney, John P. Brennan over her two children, James and Alex Stillman. The appointment was made by Justice Cahalan in surrogate court.

MARTHA ALICIA

YES, AND HERE IS THE SWEEPER VAC! Most women think the vacuum cleaner is only good for cleaning rugs, and can be used for nothing else!

But not so with the Sweeper Vac, for, as a matter of fact, with its famous motor-driven brush, it not only thoroughly cleans rugs, but is the most efficient cleaner for walls, moldings, upholstery and out-creech places.

Wilson, of 140 South Brand Blvd., the local dealer for the Sweeper Vac, says "The Sweeper Vac is not only the quick and easy way to clean, but the clean way to clean, for, instead of dusting and sweeping, which merely transfers the dust from one spot to another, you suction clean and all the soot and dirt is taken into the Sweeper Vac's one-way dirt bag!" Stop in and let Mr. Wilson show you the Sweeper Vac, and explain the excellent attachments for cleaning furniture and drapes, etc.

Two ounces of borax sprinkled over a garbage can or refuse pile will effectively prevent flies from breeding.

BEFORE YOU DECORATE BE SURE THAT YOU SEE HARRY MOORE, OF 304 EAST BROADWAY.

For they have something absolutely new and entirely different in the line of interior decorating! Every woman delights in the stipped and Tiffany blended walls to match the beautiful enameled or stipped woodwork, so much in vogue now. Mr. Moore says, "We are here to serve you to the best of our ability, with any suggestions and information that might tend to make your home even more beautiful. And, true, for they will be glad to give you any information concerning paper-hanging, interior decorating, or even sign-writing that you might desire! They will gladly show you how to use the famous Sunset Paint Co.'s products to the best advantage and how to obtain the most pleasing results with but little expense! And, too, how you can do things for yourself, that will not only save you considerable money, but afford you a great deal of pleasure and give you the most satisfactory results!"

And, while you're downtown, stop in and see Mr. Peat, the artist, who is painting such beautiful California novelties, right there at Harry Moore's! They are typical of the beauties of California, for they are even painted on the native California redwood! Just the thing for a Christmas gift for your Eastern friends and relatives. This is Mr. Peat's second visit to Glendale, and he is offering positively the best collection of fine paintings ever shown in Glendale. Don't miss the opportunity of seeing him at work this week!

Squinting the eyes is a bad habit which is rather attractive when young, but which will induce all sorts of wrinkles around the eyes when one is older.

WAY DOWN DEEP IN HER heart, every woman entertains the fond hope that some day she, too, will have a graceful figure! But, you know, Fashion's latest edict is that one must be well corseted, without appearing so. Impossible, you say? Not at all, for Mrs. Quackenbush, at SHERROD'S SPECIALTY SHOP for women and children, at 207 East Broadway, has a wonderful line of Togo and Madame Grace corsets, as well as girdles and elastic corsets. Next time you're down that way, stop in and see her, for she is now able to fit you with just the right corset in just the right way!

Dyed leghorns trimmed with arrow Valenciennes lace dyed to match and having crowns of organdy are among the midsummer millinery favorites.

IF YOU WOULD HAVE ON YOUR table at all times a healthful drink, call the INDEPENDENT ICE CO., of 106 East California Ave., and order a bottle of White Rose Spring Water—today! Their phone is Glendale 217.

YES, DO STOP IN AT PUSS'N' BOOTS, 211½ South Brand Blvd., for your luncheon, after a morning of shopping! They serve such delightful dainties—tempting dishes, deliciously cooked and graciously served. But no, they are not alone winning fame for their wonderful luncheon and dinners, for their fountain is really unsurpassed! I'm telling everyone, too, all about the wonderful candies, which they make right there under the latest approved sanitary methods and of the most wholesome ingredients! Remember—it's Puss'n' Boots—they're new here in Glendale, but already fast gaining in popularity!

It is best to curtain all windows alike, especially in cottages, if all the rooms are on one floor. Cream-colored scrim, marquisette, voile or flit net make durable as well as very good looking curtains.

WAS THERE EVER AN ARMY MARCHED TO VICTORIOUS COMBAT WITHOUT MUSIC?

No, for it is the private opinion of many that music was one of the big factors in winning the war! Our boys, over there, marched into the thick of the battle with a song on their lips—and emerged victorious! Music should play as important a part in your daily life as it did in theirs—for music it is that keeps up the spirit—and the morale of the army or the family, alike! A child raised in a home without music has missed something of this life that can never be made up to it. That is why I advocate the Ampico! The Ampico is the greatest reproducing piano, always ready at a moment's notice to play just the selection you wish to hear. It never tires, but can be set at "repeat" and will play the same selection, or your preferred passage, over and over again! The simple, soothing songs of home, that have endeared themselves to us all, the popular songs of our day, and of Grandma's, or the rhythmic music of the dance, as the occasion may warrant—all may be heard with but the pressing of a button. The BARNES-SCHUCK MUSIC CO., of 211 North Brand Blvd., is the Glendale Home of the Ampico in the Knabe and the Haines Bros. pianos. Stop in and ask to hear it, for every home should have an Ampico at Christmas time!

Colored stockings will be worn with black pumps.

Shirring is used in many of the new parasols as a decorative element.

WHERE IS THERE A FEMININE heart that wouldn't thrill at the prospect of having one of those exquisite little wrist watches for her very own? ARTHUR H. DIBBERN, of 121 North Brand Blvd., is showing some of the very newest and most attractive models at prices that will surely be of interest to the Christmas shopper! His are watches of proven merit, unsurpassed in beauty and accuracy—and finished to flawless perfection. They are exquisitely decorated and may be had in all of the most popular new shapes. Mr. Dibbern will be glad to show them to you, at any rate, and I know that you will find it a pleasure to shop in the attractive new store at 121 North Brand Blvd.

Scarlet will be extensively used in combination with navy or black.

AT THE GLENDALE PHARMACY, 638 East Broadway, I am always sure of finding an interesting item! Nor was I disappointed this week, for Mr. Stuart is featuring Brunsvig's Cocoon Oil Shampoo for 35 cents a bottle. It is really wonderful for the hair, as it does not make it brittle or cause the usual dryness of the scalp. But the best is yet to come—the Glendale Pharmacy is now serving the delicious Fru-Ber-Rice, the delightful ice cream with the fruity, winery tang. And it's made right here in Glendale, too!

Loose mandarin coats are gaining in popularity.

WON'T YOU COME WITH ME TO NEALE & GREGG'S HARDWARE STORE at 107 North Brand Blvd., to meet Miss Haenselman, the young lady from the Wear-Ever factory, who is giving such an interesting demonstration there tomorrow? Will you believe it when I tell you that she is actually going to bake ginger-bread in a Wear-Ever Aluminum Roaster, right over the stove? Yes, that's what she's promised to do tomorrow, and if you had seen the delicious dinner she cooked in the roaster, you'd never doubt the success of the gingerbread! Miss Haenselman showed me her own full meal might be cooked in the Wear-Ever roaster, consisting of meat, potatoes, carrots, sweet potatoes, cauliflower and apples. You can readily see that by cooking them in this matter, it is a saving of both time and gas! There is also a griddle for perfect cooking, and also a dandy heavy frying pan, as pictured, reduced this week from $2.00 to $1.12. Neale & Gregg's have a full new stock of Wear-Ever utensils, everything that might be used in the kitchen. Don't miss seeing Miss Haenselman tomorrow.

New neckties are cut high on one side and low on the other.

OH! MY DEAR, YOU'LL SIMPLY REVEL IN THE GORGEOUS ARRAY OF CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS AT THE GLENDALE DRY GOODS STORE, 115 EAST BROADWAY!

They are, without question, quite the most beautiful I've seen this year! Beautifully colored and decorated French writing pads and book-ends; exquisite ostrich feather pens, with real gold points, and the loveliest of ink wells to match, in sets that come in a wide range of popular colors, and at prices that are right! Then, too, there are attractive desk sets, cleverly combined with cretonne, handy long-handled powder puffs for Missy's back just before the party, dainty boudoir caps, fine handkerchiefs; much ribboned shoe trees—and just any number of other attractive novelties! A small deposit will hold any of your purchases until Christmas time, at the Glendale Dry Goods Store.

Lace is still smart for dinner and afternoon gowns.

A FIREPLACE! IF YOU LOVE A FIREPLACE LIKE I DO, YOU'LL BE SIMPLY CRAZY OVER THE ADORABLE LITTLE FIVE-ROOM HOUSE "WHICH VANDENHOFF, 205 NORTH BRAND BLVD., IS OFFERING FOR ONLY $4500!"

It is on a large lot, 53½ by 166, boasting just all sorts of shrubs and trees. It has a garage and cellar, in addition to all the built-in features imaginable, and is situated less than four blocks from Brand Blvd. Really, it's easily worth $5500! The terms, too, are reasonable, just $1500 down and the balance on easy payments; or, if you pay $2750 down, the price will be reduced to $4250! See Mr. Vandenhoff today, without fail.

Redingote frocks are to be favorites this fall.

AT THIS TIME OF THE YEAR, I think, more than any other, one enjoys a good hot drink. And coffee is the logical product! It is coffee when I'm tired, that usually puts me on my feet—and virtually gives me a "new lease on life." But not any coffee—no, indeed, for I'm wedded to BOOTH'S SPECIAL BLEND! There is none other quite like it. Mr. Booth blends his own coffees personally, in his store at 318 East Broadway—and thus one is always assured of getting the very freshest and purest. You will find that your guests, when served a cup of Booth's coffee, steaming hot, after an evening of pleasure, will simply be delighted. But, you know, there is a secret in the preparation of coffee, and until you've mastered it you will never secure the very best results. Ask Mr. Booth to tell you of the best way to prepare his coffee.

In gingham there is a strong leaning to dark shades. Bright red and white checked gingham, brown and white, a navy and white, and even black and white are combinations much approved.

IN FLANDERS' FIELDS

In Flanders' Fields the poppies grow
Between the crosses, row on row
That mark our place. And in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly Scarce heard amidst the guns below.
We are the dead. Short days ago we lived,
Felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved. And now we lie
In Flanders' Fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from fallen hands we throw
The torch! Be yours to hold it high.
And if ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders' Fields.

(Written during second battle of Ypres, April, 1917, by Lieut.-Col. McCrae. The author was killed but a few months later.)

AMERICA'S ANSWER

Rest ye in peace, ye Flanders dead,
The fight that ye so bravely led We've taken up. And we will keep True faith with ye who lie asleep,
With each a cross to mark his bed
Where once his own life-blood ran red.
So let your rest be sweet and deep—
In Flanders' Fields!

The torch ye threw to us we caught,
Ten million hands shall hold it high,
And Freedom's light shall never die.
We've learned the lesson that ye taught
In Flanders' Fields.

(The above appeared in the N. Y. Sun shortly after the death of Lieut.-Col. McCrae.)

FOR THE USUAL SATURDAY SPECIAL AT NUSSBAUM'S GROCERY AND MEAT MARKET, 244 North Brand Blvd., I have some very unusual news! Yes, indeed—for Nussbaum's are now selling Jevne's fine teas! It is the first time that tea has ever been sold in Glendale! There are packages of all sizes, covering all of the accepted tea flavors, and Miss Nussbaum herself vouches for the fact that they are simply delicious! You can also buy a 2½ pound crock of pure berry preserves, in assorted flavors—the regular $1.00 size—for only 80 cents, and the same size crock of orange marmalade, apricot, peach or plum jams, that formerly sold for 90 cents, as low as 60 cents! In the meat department, too, you'll find a number of interesting items.

Tailored wash cotton shirt-waists are worn with suits.

THE WOMEN WHO APPRECIATE

the very best in their homes will be interested in the Maytag Electric Washer at the GLENDALE FURNITURE STORE, 606-608 East Broadway. The Maytag is not by any means a cheap machine, for it is made to last a lifetime, and built for service! If you call the Glendale Furniture Store, they will be more than glad to send it out to your home that you may give it a free trial. And, you know, they are giving Rogers Silverware coupons with each purchase at the Glendale Furniture Store.

CHILDHOOD REMEMBRANCES—a glance in the window of the MISSION STORE, 107 West Broadway, with its well arranged display of lovely dolls and toys, brings them back with a rush! 'Twas there that I saw a beautiful doll for only $3.50—the best value I've seen in many a year. And, you know, any article selected now and a small deposit paid, will be held for Christmas delivery—thus saving you the usual last minute rush! And, don't forget, there are any number of nice things for boys, too!

DO YOU KNOW THAT YOU CAN NOW HAVE BRAIDING DONE RIGHT HERE IN GLENDALE? THE BROOKS' SHOPPE, at 123 North Brand Blvd., is now prepared to do fancy BRAIDING and worsted EMBROIDERY in many attractive designs. They also cover FANCY BUTTONS, with your own materials, HEMSTITCHING and PICOTING, and can PLEAT your new fall skirt, plaid or stripes, in any style you wish!

REMEMBER HOW, AFTER A LONG day of baking and "tussing" behind closed kitchen doors, mother would always reward you with fresh, warm doughnuts? And, oh! how good they tasted! M-m-m-m! It's just such wonderful doughnuts as those, always fresh baked and often warm, that caught my fancy at the QUALITY DOUGHNUT SHOPPE, 104 West California Ave. Call Glendale 220-J—they're there.

I NEVER HESITATE AN INSTANT TO RECOMMEND THE BRAND CLEANERS OF 217 SOUTH BRAND BLVD., FOR HIGH-CLASS CLEANING AND PRESSING. THEY MAKE A SPECIALTY OF LADIES' WORK!

When you light the oven to do your baking or roasting fill your tea kettle, and set it on top of the cover. Then you will have hot water without using an extra burner.

YOU HAVE EXPRESSED THE wish for a new fur this season! Well, why not take the old one to the BEDELL SHOP at 1125 North Louise St. and have it made over? Oh, my, yes! Miss Bedell does such wonderful work, she can make the oldest, most dilapidated old piece look just like new! She will redesign it, to fit your own personality, and most reasonably, too. Miss Bedell also carries an excellent stock of lovely skins of all kinds from which you may make your selection, for she often makes garments to order. But call Glendale 429-J and ask for the prices.

It is a good idea to select one color for your tone for a season and buy everything to harmonize with that tone. Then, by changing combinations, you may have several outfits at smaller cost.

Deaf Boy Will Receive High Honors

Artist, high-ranking high school student, winner of medals for selling Liberty bonds and war savings stamps. This is the record hung up by Ellsworth Davis, of Los Angeles. He has done it all despite the fact that he was born deaf. He never has received a grade in any subject lower than "A," which is the highest given at the Polytechnic high school, where he is now a student. The boy attended the Mary McGowan School of the Deaf in Chicago for nine years.

Attend Meeting—A communication from the League of the Southwest was read at the meeting of the city council Thursday night, inviting the body to attend the annual general meeting of that organization, to be held at Riverside, Calif., December 8, 9 and 10. The meeting this year will discuss the resources of the Colorado river. On motion of Councilman Lapham, it was voted that Superintendent of Plant and Production Diederich be instructed to attend the meeting and that his expenses be paid by the city.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 10.—Officials of the B. and O. railroad today denied a report that Marshal Foch's train had been re-routed because they discovered a plot to assassinate him. Police declared they knew nothing of the reported plot.

CREDIT SUNSHINE RAISIN FOR BEAUTY

Fresno Winner of $1,000 Prize Says All These Made Her Winner

FRESNO, Nov. 10.—Although born in Texas, Miss Gertrude Eggett credits sunshine, athletics and raisins for having won for her a $1,000 prize as the most perfectly formed girl in the United States. The award was made by an eastern magazine and today Fresno was proudly boasting for Miss Eggett's honors. She lives here with her father, who is an invalid—supporting him from her salary as an office clerk. Miss Eggett is aged 25, weighs 136 pounds and is 5 feet 7 inches tall. She is a native of Orange county, Texas, but has lived 12 years in California.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmothers made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep their locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

ARMISTICE DAY Recalls to 'Our Own DOUGH BOYS'

The remarkable "Knight Motors" performance of the in the tanks that ploughed through "No man's Land." After this motor, selected in preference over a hundred other makes of motors, has rendered such an UNFAILING and enduring service in the protection of "our boys," there is no reason why your next car should not be a Willys-Knight.

SLEEVE VALVE MOTOR

"Improves with use" is no blatant statement. It is proven by the thousands of these motors in use today after a long period of years of service. Did you ever stop to think that "The advertisement columns very rarely list WILLYS-KNIGHT cars for resale?" Take notice of this. Their life of usefulness is unlimited. Note the refinement in the distinctive lines of the New Willys-Knight car of 1922. Then consider the superior construction of the motor. No valves to grind or delicate mechanism to get out of adjustment. No carbon to clean out. No valve tappet noise. When these troubles are eliminated, 75 per cent of your repair expense is eliminated. Compare the price of this car with other makes of cars of the same class of workmanship and refinement. "A Fair Decision" must invariably be in favor of the "Willys-Knight." We are only too glad to furnish you with a beautiful booklet entitled, "The Story of the Willys-Knight Sleeve-Valve Motor."

AUTOMOBILE PRICES

IN GLENDALE TODAY

AUTOMOBILES have led the commercial world in the drive back to normal price standards; in fact, there are numerous instances where present quotations on motor cars are lower than ever before in the history of the industry.

Automobile prices ARE down. And with the substantial reductions have come better engineering, better construction and greater attractiveness of body design. Equipment is better and more complete.

Automobile values never were greater. Motor cars have been steadily improved, yet prices have receded. The automobile dollar buys as much, if not more, than it ever did.

For the purpose of clarifying the situation in Glendale as regards automobile prices, the Glendale Daily Press, in co-operation with the automobile dealers, herewith presents to its readers the actual selling prices, delivered in Glendale, of a large number of cars on the market.

Considerable confusion has been caused in the public mind by reason of the fact that heretofore some dealers have quoted factory prices, while others have given prices of cars delivered here.

The quotations given herewith are for cars delivered in Glendale, including war tax, making it possible to obtain a standard of relative value that was impossible before.

While the list is not complete, the Glendale Daily Press commends to its readers a careful study of the announcements made below by a representative number of automobile distributors of this city, confident that they will be of great value to all of them, and particularly to those persons who are contemplating the purchase of new motor cars.

Grand View Memorial Park

"Glendale's Own Cemetery"

For the Convenience of Those Who Visit Grand View Sundays a Representative Will Be on the Ground to Give Detailed Information

Why Procrastinate?

It is greatly to your advantage to investigate Grand View Memorial Park immediately. The beautiful locations and the low prices at which these locations are now being offered on very convenient terms will surely appeal to you.

Everyone should provide a suitable plot in a modern PERPETUAL CARE burial park, in advance of any anticipated need.

It is good judgment to make your purchase when your mind is free from distress. Careful investigation will prove to you that there is no cemetery in Southern California so ideally located or more tenderly cared for. New chapel has just been completed—and plans for new Mausoleum are nearing completion.

Every lot is high and dry—perfectly drained. We guarantee absolutely that there are no watery graves.

Here you will find every service and consideration during the trying times when the service such as we offer is necessary. Our private car is at your service when visiting the grounds without charge.

HARRY CONNORS ONE OF FIRST OVER TO FRANCE IN WAR

Left Business in Stockton to Answer Call of Country "Over There"

One of General John J. Pershing's first 100,000 soldiers to sail for France when war was declared, is living in Glendale at present and is a member of Glendale Post No. 127 American Legion. He is Harry Connors, who served overseas as a member of the headquarters company of the general headquarters of the United States army immediately after the signing of the declaration of war. He left a prosperous business in Stockton, Calif., and went to Fort McDowell where he enlisted as a private in company K, 16th infantry, and was shipped overseas among the first American troops to go.

Mr. Connors was wounded in his first battle near Clay, France, on the drive that later led the Marines and infantry regiments through Chateau Thierry in the battle that will always be remembered as one of the greatest in the history of the A. E. F. After leaving the hospital Mr. Connors, who then had the rank of sergeant, was attached to the general headquarters staff as chauffeur for General Palmer. When not driving for the general, Sergeant Connors acted as a carrier of messages.

When the armistice was signed on November 11, 1918, Sergeant Connors was sent from Fleuville to Bourges, France, with dispatches from general headquarters to the commander of an aviation camp in Bourges. When the news of the signing of the armistice was published Sergeant Connors was eating breakfast in Oyon, a small town near Fleuville.

The old woman who was serving his breakfast threw her arms around the neck of the sergeant and wept with joy at the thought that the war had ended after four years that had taken toll of the best French manhood. From Oyon Sergeant Connors proceeded to a small town near Bourges where his car was surrounded by French soldiers and civilians. They literally dragged him from his automobile and forced him to join the celebration. It was two days before he could leave the town. Every attempt was met with protests by the residents and he was forced to remain.

The sergeant relates that every house in the village was literally covered with flags and the streets were so crowded with French civilians, soldiers, and American soldiers that walking was next to impossible. Parades occurred so often that it was hard to tell when one ended and another started. He finally managed to leave town and deliver his dispatches and return to general headquarters at Chaumont.

At Chaumont everything was quiet and the only thing to indicate that the war had ended was a notice on the bulletin board to the effect that an armistice had been signed. Soldiers performed their usual duties with a calmness that seemed unusual when compared with the wild excitement that reigned all over France.

ROBERT CORRIGAN'S WAR EXPERIENCE WAS VARIED

Was in Lorient, France, Three Years Ago Today Celebrating Day

Robert J. Corrigan of the Glendale Daily Press advertising department served during the World War in the United States Navy. He enlisted in Chicago as a second-class seaman and was discharged a second-class storekeeper. Soon after enlisting, Corrigan was sent to France and told that he was to be a part of the naval battery. He was issued his complete outfit of U. S. D. clothes, and soon after arriving in France his O. D.'s were taken away from him and he returned to the navy blues. He was assigned to duty aboard the destroyer McDonough, rating as a second-class seaman.

Corrigan was on the destroyer four months and was then transferred to Destroyer Minesweeping Base No. 19 at Lorient, France. After two months' service at the base, he was transferred to the destroyer McDonough for five days to act as a part of the escort of the steamer George Washington, which was bringing President Wilson to France to take part of the first conference at Versailles.

On Armistice Day the town of Lorient went wild, says Mr. Corrigan. Impromptu parades were features of every minute during the day. The entire Destroyer Squadron No. 4 was ordered ashore on Armistice Day and took part in a monster parade. The town of Lorient was decorated for two days previous to the signing of the armistice, as news had been received saying that representatives of Germany were meeting in France to negotiate for peace and would sign the armistice on Armistice Day. Scenes in the city of Lorient were similar to Armistice Day scenes in other parts of France. The war-weary people aroused from the apathy of four years and celebrated with the enthusiasm that is seen but once in the life of a nation, and that is when it has passed the most critical time of its existence.

AGED MAN WANTED TO BE LEFT TO DIE

BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 10.—"Let me alone. I just want to die." Glad in rags, ill and hungry, John Kruse, an aged man said to have wealthy relatives in Southern California, feebly fought off police here today when he was picked up on the streets and taken to the county hospital. Kruse said his brother was foreman of the Santa Rosa ranch near San Diego.

A Tremendous Building Boom Is On

Building Permits For October Reach Total of $716,780

Glendale's Rapid Growth

Has filled the city full to overflowing with people.

The high rents are simply an indication of the crowded condition of the city. People are doubled up everywhere—it is almost impossible to rent a house. An enormous amount of building is the only thing that will relieve the rent situation—and every house must have a lot!

All the vacant lots in the built-up sections are priced extremely high. This is your chance to secure a lot which will raise in value.

Like an Oil Boom

Only permanent. Instead of investing in something with an unknown value, people in Glendale are investing in homes—the safest of all investments.

That property values here will increase is evidenced by the fact that the money spent for improvements each month is steadily becoming greater.

October was a record month for building—but indications point to an even greater record for November and December.

GENERAL PERSHING SEES SUCCESS IN ARMS PARLEY

Sees Rosey Outlook for Opportunity to Cut Down Arms to Avert Wars

(Copyright 1921 by United Press.)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—John J. Pershing sees "complete success" in the Washington conference on limitation of armaments. The chief of staff and general of the armies of the United States expressed himself in an exclusive interview with the United Press on the eve of the assembling of the conference.

In his first interview on arms limitation, Pershing says the conference will be "one of the most important ever held." He believes the "prospects are excellent for cutting down the chances of war." He keenly realizes the burdens and sufferings of the peoples of the world in modern armaments and war. Leader of the A. E. F. in France during the most terrible war of history, and this country's greatest authority on modern warfare, General Pershing in giving his opinions on the conference is making an important contribution to a proper understanding of this epochal event. General Pershing's opinions are valuable for another reason. He is just back in his office in the war department after a trip to France and England, where he decorated the graves of the unknown French and British soldiers with the congressional medal of honor, and has just returned from Kansas City where he attended the American Legion convention. So he had an opportunity to judge the temper of the people of Europe and America toward the conference.

"The coming conference on limitation of armaments will be one of the most important ever held," said Pershing. "I believe that the prospects are excellent for better understanding among the leading nations that will materially reduce the chances of war. The tremendous cost of perpetual preparation for war is a serious burden from which the people are anxious to be relieved as far as possible, to say nothing of the relief from the suffering that war brings."

"The impression that I received abroad and on my trip west regarding the outcome of the conference is most favorable, and personally, I can see no reason why it should not be a complete success."

Pershing is a leading member of President Harding's advisory committee on the conference on limitation of armaments. As a member of this committee and as chief of staff of the United States Army, his opinions will be sought and will have great weight in the shaping by this Government of its course in the conference.

WE BOW OUR HEADS

RECOGNIZING that today marks the third anniversary of the end of the world war, and its special significance lies in the ceremony in Washington today, where an unknown world war hero of the United States will be buried with full military honors for himself and his comrades in arms, we again pay tribute to the men who went across the seas to stem the oncoming tide of victories by the central powers, and to those who donned the uniform to do their bit wherever called to serve.

In the moments of great business activity as it is presented in competitive life today, we sometimes hear that men forget what the boys of the United States did in the world war. We do NOT forget, nor will we forget so long as time goes on, that the brave boys offered their lives and gave them, so that today we face the world as the greatest nation on the face of the earth.

LAUGHTER AND TEARS

Laughter and tears—laughter and tears,
Mingled together through all of the years.
Dawn and the twilight and blue skies and gray,
So with their changes they make up the day.
Rain at the dawning and sunshine at noon,
Quick runs the mood from December to June.
Now the ash quivers and now the rose cheers,
So with this life and its laughter and tears.

Dimple and tear-drop, a sigh and a song,
Both in the measure and neither for long;
Noonday and midnight and dawn and the dusk,
Garland and blossom and chaff and the husk.
Hand-clasp and heart-break, hellos and good-byes,
Joy's merry singing and sorrow's wet eyes,

Now the lip quivers and now the smile cheers,
This, then, is life with its laughter and tears.

Laughter and tears, laughter and tears,
Down the long lane how each figure appears,
One with her sorrow and one with her song,
Both in the measure and neither for long.
Smile and a sigh and the ash and the rose,
One and the other and each comes and goes,
Now the kiss lingers and now the scar sears,
Dawn and the laughter and dusk and the tears.

Twinkle and wrinkle, and glad hearts and torn,
Thistle and rosebud and petal and thorn,
Down the long vista of memory's days,
Still the two figures are changing always,
One with the other, the sigh and the song,
Both in the measure and neither for long.
Limping and dancing the way of the years,
Tears near to Laughter and Laughter near Tears!

QUO VADIS SHOWN GLENDALE THEATER

Great Production Now On at Local Movie For Two Day Run

'Quo Vadis,' the first big motion picture ever presented in America and one of the most sensational, thrilling and dramatic films ever produced, tells a most wonderful story. The play was adapted from the world famous story of Henry Sienkiewicz's novel. In its realistic and faithful effects and detail, the motion picture is a masterpiece of its kind.

The picture places before its audience the actual Apian Way, the Coliseum, the Forum, Emperor Nero's Palace and banqueting halls, the Eternal City, Rome itself, and many other historical scenes. Every scene is real.

Realism is in evidence in mob scenes, the torturing of the early Christians and the orgies at Nero's banquets. A group of lions are seen emerging from a den and later devour the followers of the lowly Nazarene, which is one of the features of the presentation of the arena atrocities planned by the merciless Nero and his villainous lieutenant, Tigellinus. Rome is burned from end to end, while the terror stricken populace flees in confusion. Gladiators fight deadly combats in the arena, and kill each other at the sign of Nero's inverted thumb, and Nero dies by his own hand.

There is a powerful love story running through the film. Vinitius, a Pagan, is in love with Lygia, a Christian. Nero orders the girl strapped to the back of an infuriated bull, and then gives orders to release the animal in the arena. The girl is saved by the giant Ursus, who throws the animal, breaks its neck and rescues the girl.

'Quo Vadis' was shown at the Glendale theater last night and created quite a sensation. It will be exhibited again tonight. This picture always calls for a "repeat" wherever it is shown.

In addition to this big feature there will be a side-splitting comedy and an up-to-date news reel. The regular weekly vaudeville is scheduled for Saturday night.

Entertain Chums—Miss Marie Hearnshaw and Miss Sara Allen combined to entertain five of their school chums with a luncheon and an afternoon of bunko on Thursday, which was a school holiday. Both decorated their homes with chrysanthemums and the luncheon was served at the Allen residence, 354 West Lomita, the afternoon being passed at the Hearnshaw home, 358 West Lomita, where Marjory Gunyon won first prize, the consolation prize going to Emma Laura Cooper.

HALF WAY HOUSE IS SKETCH AT T. D. & L.

Rural Sketch at Local Theatre in Vaudeville Hit of the Season

'The Half Way House' is one of the most delightful rural sketches presented on the vaudeville stage in years. Mr. and Mrs. Perkins Fisher have played this little playlet on the Pantages circuit with huge success and it is only because of their desire to spend a few weeks in California that Meiklejohn and Dunn are able to arrange their appearance in Glendale.

There are very few attractions that are able to play a return engagement at Grauman's Million-Dollar theater. The Dixie Four have appeared at this theater many times and are always well received when they play there. This dusky quartet offers many new songs and imitations and is considered the best quartet on the Pacific Coast.

Bemont and Krake, two dainty misses, are sure to charm their audience with their clever bits of melody that go to make up the act. These young ladies play many different instruments and play them all well. They also have just completed an engagement at Grauman's Million-Dollar theater, where their lovely voices captivated all who heard them.

'Moonlight and Honeysuckle' is the title of the latest starring vehicle of Mary Miles Minter. This is a light comedy drama, full of twists and turns of plot, that will win many new admirers for Miss Minter.

GREESGUN GIRL IS HERE FOR A VISIT

Billy Has Nickel Plated
Motor Cycle To Show
Great Greesgun

Billy the I. & M. Greesgun Girl, is in town and is thrilling the natives with her nickel-plated motorcycle. Miss Billy, clad in a natty black leather suit, with black leather cap perched upon her head, is an entrancing sight as she rides about the streets on her special motorcycle.

The machine is of nickel plate and in place of a side car, a giant I. & M. Greesgun is mounted on wheels. Today is Miss Billy's last day in Glendale and during her stay here has made many friends. From Glendale and during her stay here she will ride her motor to San Barbara where she will spend several days demonstrating the Greesgun, and from there she will ride to San Francisco for a demonstration.

Miss Billy, who, by the way, will give no name other than "Billy," is a resident of Eagle Rock, and says that she thinks motorcycling is the greatest sport ever. She not only rides a motorcycle six days a week but on Sunday, by way of pleasure and rest.

Purely Personal

Rev. C. A. Cole and wife, C. W. Bacon and wife, and Mrs. H. W. Yarrick represented Glendale at the State Sunday school convention in Anaheim Wednesday. Rev. Cole addressed the convention twice and taught a model men's class.

Mrs. Elizabeth Williams and children have moved from 216 East Windsor road to 114 West Laurel.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Stockbridge have moved from 231 North Adams street to a new home they have purchased at 610 West California avenue.

Miss Evangeline Quackenbush, 1119 East Colorado street, has returned from a 10-day visit with friends in San Francisco and Oakland.

GLENDALE CHAPTER DID GREAT WORK IN WORLD WAR PERIOD

Faithful Women Worked Day After Day to Help Boys Who Were On the Line

The Glendale Chapter of the Red Cross has earned a place in the remembrance of this generation of citizens that will not soon be obliterated from the tablets of memory, regardless of the records at Washington and the Pacific headquarters.

It is not so very long ago since the men, women and children of our community were united in a common endeavor under the white banner centered with the red cross. Little folks in the kindergarten were cutting paper to fill the ambulance comfort pillows, older little ones—boys as well as girls, were knitting squares to be made into comforters for soldiers in hospitals over seas. Busy housewives were stealing time from home duties to work in the surgical dressings department where thousands of yards of gauze bandages were cut and rolled, or in the hospital department where shirts and bath gowns were made for war hospital patients. Besides this faithful service continued day after day and week after week was the knitting done at home by daughters, mothers, and grandmothers, and the thousands of one activities in other ways to raise money for the Red Cross or other war calls were counted as recreation at a time when every cent was being conserved for the support of the war and the relief of the hardships endured by our soldiery.

In all this endeavor the Red Cross was the central organization and to its standard rallied the best men and women in the community. Our local chapter was organized about a year before the United States entered the world war and as a branch of the Los Angeles chapter, but within six months was re-organized as an independent institution with J. H. Braly, whose interest and contributions were unfailing, as its chairman in name. Mr. McCrea, now a missionary in China, was its acting chairman. Mrs. Mabel Franklin Ocker accepted the secretaryship, and F. H. Vesper was treasurer. But Mr. McCrea was called to Y. M. C. A. work and A. L. Lawshe, now dead, who had been for years an efficient government official in Washington, took his place and organized the work as it developed. It was a strenuous task for which he asked no compensation and when his health began to fail under the strain his place was taken for a few months by Olin Spencer who was succeeded by Mrs. H. E. Bartlett. She guided the destiny of the organization in her own quiet, efficient way until its more strenuous activities ceased, and she is still its chairman.

Around her gathered a wonderful group of unselfish workers—Mrs. Evelyn Tuft, who organized the surgical dressings department, Mrs. W. E. Evans, Mrs. Lawrence Ellis, Mrs. Helen Sadler, Mrs. R. P. Jodon, in the hospital department, Miss Maybelle Douglas, who organized the Red Cross store which brought such a steady income to the chapter and which was later carried on by Mrs. Jack Boetner, and Mrs. Fannie Stockbridge. Then there was L. T. Rowley, head of the salvage department who supplemented the work of hundreds of school children in their drives for newspapers and bottles, metals, old clothes, etc.; Mrs. A. M. Beamon, chairman of comfort bag production, Miss Coral Griffith, chairman of aviation jackets; Mrs. H. E. Betz, head of the ambulance pillow department; Mrs. George Carter and Miss Elizabeth Ainsworth who organized the knitting department in which they were followed by Mrs. Ezra Parker, Mrs. West and Mrs. G. K. Barnes. In affiliation with these were the workers in the conservation department in which old garments were made over by Mesdames Ben Nichols, C. H. Thompson, P. A. Wells, Fred C. Myton, and others. Helpers to be relied upon in the packing and other departments were Mesdames R. E. Chase, Glenwood Jones, A. S. Chase, John Robert White, R. A. Blackburn, the faithful cashier, and Ezra Parker, always ready to lend a hand where help was needed.

On the outside as a constant promoter of enthusiasm and organizer of Red Cross entertainments to swell treasury funds was Dr. Henry R. Harrower.

One of the most quiet but most necessary officials was the chairman of the Home Service department, which aided the dependents of service men without publicity. Mrs. Arthur C. Brown was and is the head of that branch still maintained for the assistance of ex-service men and their families.

At its greatest enrollment the chapter numbered about 3000 active members and successfully carried on a big work much commended at headquarters. Though its activities have declined it still responds to many calls local and foreign and commands the respect and confidence of a large body of members.

Its present officers are Mrs. H. E. Bartlett, chairman; Ezra Parker, vice-chairman; Mrs. John Robert White, secretary; Mrs. C. D. Lusby, treasurer; executive committee, the above officers and Mesdames Hartley Shaw, A. A. Barton and Daniel Campbell.

FLORIDA WOMAN IS HELD FOR MURDER

ORLANDO, Fla., Nov. 10.—An indictment for first-degree murder against Lena M. T. Clarke was returned this afternoon by the grand jury. The chauffeur who drove Miss Clarke to Orlando on August 1, when she is alleged to have killed Fred T. Miltimore of this city, was also charged with first-degree murder.

Work on Aprons—Members of the calling committee of the Tuesday Afternoon Club were invited to the home of Mrs. J. S. Hearnshaw yesterday. Not all were able to accept but Mrs. Stephen Packer, Mrs. William Fariander and Mrs. C. H. House presented themselves and the ladies spent a pleasant social afternoon while working on aprons for the club bazaar.
